April milk production up at least 2% over '84

BY JAMES H. EVERHART

Milk production throughout the Northeast increased at least two percent in April, causing concern that the dairy industry is once again headed for unhealthy surpluses.

The increase, dairy economists note, is in apparent response to favorable grain prices, and only partly a result of the end of the federal dairy diversion program.

Two weeks ago, USDA officials confirmed that the nation's milk output in March climbed 1.1 percent over previous-year levels

At that time, dairy experts indicated that a spring flush of surplus milk could have dire consequences for the dairy industry, both in the marketplace and in the U.S. Congress, where new dairy legislation will be formulated later this year.

Officials at Eastern, NEDCO and Inter-State cooperatives all say preliminary figures show milk production is up a solid two to three percent since April 1.

Sketchy information available from Federal Order No. 4 (Middle Atlantic region) would seem to confirm those trends. In Order No. 2, however, conflicting reports indicate a smaller increase, or even possibly a decline in April, over previous-year levels.

"Everybody is seeing an increase," said Robert Dever, assistant general manager at Inter-State, "and it's more than anyone had anticipated."

The current surge in production, according to Eastern's manager of economics and governmental relations, Joe Mathis, is actually a typical springtime increase.

"It would appear that we are going to experience a more normal flush situation this year, than we did in 1984," he said.

Last year, he said, the negative economic situation and the dairy

Farmers seek balanced budget and expanded foreign markets

BY SUZANNE KEENE

WASHINGTON, D.C. — While each commodity group would like to see a farm bill that caters to its individual interests, all share a common desire for a balanced budget and expanded foreign markets.

In a panel presentation at the USDA's Farm Women Forum in Washington last week, commodity representatives stressed the need for a farm bill around which all farmers can unite — a fiscally responsible plan with a market orientation.

Tom Cook of the National Cattlemen's Association seemed to be speaking for many on the panel when he said farmers are willing to take their share of the budget cuts necessary to reduce the deficit. However, Cook added, they believe other parts of the budget left untouched by Reagan's proposed plan should be cut as well.

Panel members were also concerned about the effect of the strong dollar on farmers' ability to compete in the world market. All said they would like to see expanded foreign markets and are taking steps to achieve that goal.

Darwin Stolte, U.S. Feed Grains Council, said his organization is concentrating its efforts on developing world markets, especially in Third World countries where it sees the greatest potential for market growth.

"We see more per capita purchasing power in these economies," he said. Per capita growth in these areas has shown a 13 to 19 percent annual increase, while in developed countries the rate is only seven to nine percent.

Stolte said he sees the world market expanding, but questioned whether the United States will be

Strong dollar, excess supply, plague agriculture markets

BY SUZANNE KEENE

WASHINGTON — The strong value of the dollar, dwindling foreign markets and excess supplies are creating problems for many farmers, a panel of market experts told participants in USDA's Farm Women Forum in Washington last week.

Panel members shared their knowledge of the current foreign and domestic markets for various commodities and made projections about future prices and markets

Prices for all grains are running close to loan rates, said Eileen Manfredi, World Agricultural Outlook Board With supply outstripping demand, "We do not see a rosy outlook for grains next year," she reported. The excess supply should mean depressed prices in the future

Both U S and foreign supply prospects are bright, with good corn and wheat crops expected this year, Manfredi said But while supply is good, domestic demand for grain has been static Demand could increase, but it probably won't rise enough to affect prices, she said

Foreign demand is also in a

Other co-ops drafted in plan to aid NEDCO

BY JAMES H. EVERHART

ALBANY, NY — New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets Joseph Gerace is spearheading a high-level effort to offer financial help to the troubled Northeast Dairy Cooperative Federation, Inc.

Gerace reportedly held a meeting between NEDCO officials and heads of other dairy co-ops to find ways in which the other organizations could help bolster NEDCO's sagging fortunes.

And although the commissioner's office declined to disclose the nature or substance of the talks, Deputy Commissioner Edgar King said the department is having "almost daily" conversations with the ailing federation, regarding its current financial status and measures proposed to alleviate some of the problems.

"It's no secret in the trade that NEDCO is meeting with other people in the trade, hoping to find a solution to their problems," King said.

In a related matter, the Department also disclosed that it has launched an investigation into the "price war" situation that is blamed for some of NEDCO's woes.

The department has subpoenaed the records of virtually every major player in the central New York fluid milk market, including NEDCO and other producer organizations like Dairylea, and some major handlers in New York City.

According to Thomas Conway, counsel to the Commissioner, the investigation is designed to determine "if there is destructive competition," in violation of state law.

The department ordered the investigation after receiving complaints of "sales below cost by a number of different dealers," Conway said. The inquiry, initiated

Though Dave Reinecker is probably best known through his activities with the state and national Pork Councils, there isn't much about farming--or life, for that matter--that doesn't interest this enterprising Adams County farmer. Read about the Reinecker operation on page A-22.

Anne and Marty Grey of York find that running is a great way to keep fit. While many farm folks claim they just don't have time for exercise, the Greys say their health is important enough to make time. For more on the Greys, turn to page B2.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Be Aware of Fungus Problems on Wheat

Dr. Elwood Hatley, Extension Agronomist at Penn State, is quite concerned about the build up of the various fungus problems on wheat. Spot checks in fields around Lancaster and Harrisburg indicate a considerable amount of Septoria or leaf spot. Also, powdery mildew was above normal levels and leaf rust was detected on quite a bit of wheat. This indicates that even if the weather gets too warm for mildew to develop, the rust will thrive under these conditions. Another problem that has occurred is the development of the mildew race that is capable of attacking the Tyler variety of wheat. In spot checks around Lancaster, the disease is present on Tyler wheat.

Growers should check the plants and be prepared to spray if necessary. For powdery mildew and leaf rust the fungicide Bayleton is effective, but for leaf spot, Dithane M-45 or Manzate will be needed. Follow label directions for proper application rates.

To Prepare for Soybean Planting

First, we need rain because soybeans should be planted in warm, moist soil. After we get some rain to moisten our soil and the soil temperature is at least 62° F, soybeans can be planted.

Many people planting soybeans will either end up with too many plants per acre or too few. This will happen because they will use the pounds per acre philosophy which won't work with soybeans. Because the soybean seed differs greatly in size, this also means they differe greatly in number of seeds per pound. For example, one variety may average 2,100 seeds per pound while another variety averages 3,100 seeds per pond. So, if you plant a bushel of seed with 85 percent germination, that's a difference of about 48,000 plants per acre.

The only way to plant beans is by seeds per foot of row. If a grain drill is used, three beans per foot of row is plenty. If a 30-inch corn row is used, eight to nine beans per foot is about right.

To Be Careful With Weed Sprayers

Farmers and gardeners should keep in mind that many weed killer materials will stick in the equipment for years. This is especially true of all forms of 2,4-D. Sprayers in which this material has been used should be kept only for weed spraying, or very carefully cleaned. The use of very hot water and household ammonia (1 part ammonia to 100 parts of hot water) is suggested; this misture should be allowed to stand for 24 hours in the equipment and then sprayed out. Extreme care should be taken with this cleaning job after each herbicide treatment.

The safest method is to have separate sprayers for weed killers. Over the years I can recall a number of tobacco and vegetable plants that have been damaged because a sprinkling can or sprayer used last fall was not thoroughly cleaned.

To Check Farm Ponds

Many ponds are showing both algae and weed infestation build up and as the weather gets warmer, these pond plants will begin to grow. Permits are needed in order for the owners to use the proper material, and to protect livestock downstream from the pond. Before any ponds are treated in Pennsylvania with any chemical or fertilizer, the owner should obtain a permit from the Pennsylvania Fish Commission. Application for the permit is available from the Pennsylvania Waterways Patrol Office or from our Penn State Extension Office.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THE FAULTFINDER FINDS GOD

May 5, 1985

Background Scripture:
40-1 through 42:6.
Devotional Reading:
Job 34:10-28.

"Shall a faultfinder contend with the Almighty? He who argues with God, let him answer it." (Job 40:1).

God has listened patiently while Job has made his impassioned argument against the justice of God. But now, it is Job's turn to listen while God asks question after question which Job cannot answer:

"Have you an arm like God, and can you thunder with a voice like his?"

"Can you draw out Levia-thin with a fishhook, or press down his tongue with a cord?"

"Who has given to me, that I should repay him?"

One after another come the mighty questions from God and suddenly Job begins to realize his limitations. He is not God. He is the creature rather than the Creator. "Behold," he says, "I am of small account; what shall I answer thee?"

REMEMBER WHO

When we suffer--physically, mentally, spiritually–like Job we find God saying to us, "Just remember who you are!–the creature, not the Creator. "It seems strange for God to have to remind us of that but that is precisely what many of us need. We keep thinking we are God–unconsciously, of course. We act as if the world is being brone on our two shoulders alone. But, occasionally we run into a situation that no amount of clear thinking, hard work and persistent belief can put it within out control. We have human limitations and some[illegible]'s only when we suffer that we [illegible]eminded, like Job: "Therefore I have what I did not understand, things too wonderful for me, which I did not know."

The problems, therefore, with challenging God as Job did, is not that it is wrong or irreverent, but that we have neither the wisdom nor the capacity for wisdom to handle the answers to those questions.

FROM HEAR TO SEE

And when Job begins to realize and acknowledge his human limitations, he is at last open to experience the presence of God. It is in a moment such as this that God becomes very real to us – sometimes for the first time in our life. Like Job we can then make that great confession: "I had heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now my eye sees thee" (42:5). At this point, his intellectual beliefs are forged into a faith that does not have to have all the answers.

So, his experience of suffering became the opportunity through which God was able to change his life. God does not cause our suffering, but comes to us in the midst of it and gets our attention. He reminds us who we are and also who he is. In short, the faultfinder finds God.

April milk totals increase

diversion program kept production from rising sharply, as it normally does in springtime.

The economists said little emphasis for the increase could be placed on the end of the dairy diversion program, since few producers in the region participated.

"There are other factors at work here," explained Dever.

Most said favorable grain prices have helped create a more favorable dairy economy.

"They're just feeding and feeding and feeding," said Lackawanna County Extension Director Tom Jurchak. And considering current prices for feed, he said, "if I had corn, I'd be better off feeding it to a cow."

Jurchak also indicated that he thought the increases in Order No. 4 reflected producers' continued recovery from the drought of 1983.

"Because of the drought, Order No. 4 is out of step with the rest of the nation," said Jurchak, and thus conclusions about the overall direction of dairy production should not be drawn from local statistics.

The number of dairy producers has dropped significantly since last year, said Mathis, but production per producer has, for the most part, managed to compensate for the loss of dairymen.

In Order No. 4, for instance, the number of producers has dropped about four percent, while production per farm has climbed enough to project a two percent rise through the year.

All the dairy economists said they expect the oversupply to have a negative impact on prices in the coming year.

Although the average price Mathis projects for milk should almost be the same as last year's, the month-to-month projection should almost be a "mirror image" — not a pretty sight for producers, he adds.

Last year's prices started low and rose throughout the year, as market supplies began to diminish. This year, however, prices have started high but are expected to drop continuously, ending up about $1 per hundredweight less in December than they were the preceding January.

Mathis said he expects prices to continue dropping until there is enough "price pressure" on producers to "rebalance supply with commercial demand."

And though some experts say that the $11.60 price support figure expected to go into effect this summer may well bring about that balance, Mathis said he's not sure the process will occur as rapidly as the Reagan Adminstration would like.

He cited one USDA study that indicated a much more rapid "balancing" would occur at a $10 support price. Specifically, government "removals" or support purchases would decline sharply to about three billion pound equivalents in 1987, down from the 8.5 billion pounds purchased last year.

NEDCO

within the past few weeks, also will test another allegation — that the lowered prices have not been passed on to consumers,

Officials from the other organizations declined to discuss the nature of the negotiations among the co-ops. However, one did say that the efforts involve assumption of subsidiary or unprofitable services only . . . and do not concern a merger between Syracuse-based NEDCO and another dairy organization.

NEDCO's two major problems, officials said, involved unprofitable fluid milk contracts with several New York handlers, and a "non-performing asset" in its Fultonville plant.

The situation came to a head the end of last year, when supplies got tight, and the federation had to purchase milk on the spot market to meet its contractual obligations.

Earlier this year, NEDCO's financial situation became critical when many of the organization's milk checks to producers were returned.

A number of producer groups and member co-ops threatened to bolt, and many served notice that they intended to leave the federation.

NEDCO officials this week said that most have decided not to leave, at this point, and membership rolls have stabilized.

At a regularly scheduled meeting held this week, NEDCO's board of directors reportedly was considering a number of financial options, including some of the aid proposals from other cooperative organizations.

Observers said they did not think any substantive decisions on major issues would be reached at the two-day parley, and indicated that immediate action would not be forthcoming for several more days.

The New York contracts, which informants said left little margin for error, apparently are one of the major stumbling blocks precluding a marriage with one of the other co-op groups.

"Under perfect conditions, it might have been all right," said one source. But in the changing market situation of the past two years, the long-term contract has been one of the major causes for NEDCO's financial woes.

Another source also said he doubted any likelihood of a merger, noting, "they can't bring anything to the table except bad news." He also said be expected the controverial Fultonville plant to be closed "imminently,"

Currently faced with a surplus situation, NEDCO announced that it is reopening its balancing plant at Middlebury Center, PA. The plant was scheduled to begin condensing, drying and churning on Wednesday.

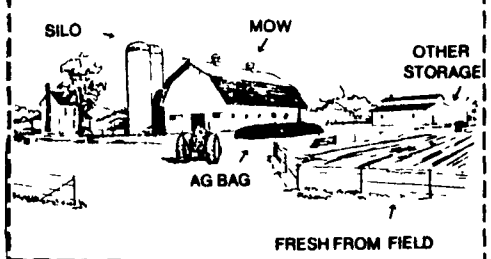
THEY'VE CHANGED FORAGE TESTING FOR THE BETTER

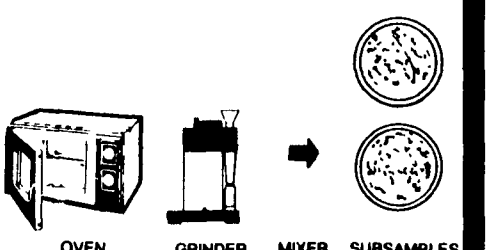
THEY USE NIR ANALYSIS TECHNIQUES TO SPEED FORAGE TEST RESULTS TO YOU IN LESS THAN 36 HOURS!

THEY DESCRIBE THE DEVELOPMENT OF THEIR ACCURATE CALIBRATIONS FROM ISI* /PSCO*

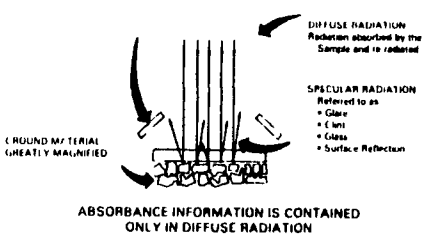
1. "Our calibration is composed of many hundreds of actual forage and feed samples (our hay calibration alone has nearly 1,000 samples in it) taken from farms throughout North America including many from Pennsylvania."



2. "Each sample was dried, finely ground, thoroughly mixed and split into small sub-samples."

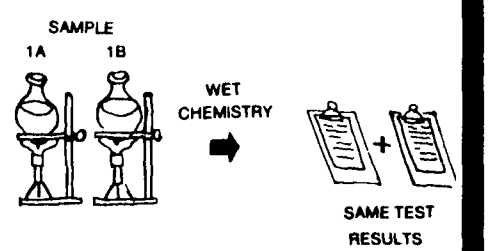


3. "Sub-samples were then "scanned" with Near Infrared Radiation (NIR) and the diffuse radiation coming back from the sample was analyzed and the data was stored in a computer for use in step No. 5"

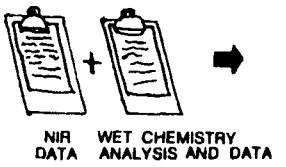


DIFFUSE RADIATION
SPECULAR RADIATION
GROUND MATERIAL GREATLY MAGNIFIED
ABSORBANCE INFORMATION IS CONTAINED ONLY IN DIFFUSE RADIATION

4. "The same samples were then analyzed using approved "wet chemistry" procedures. Each sample was actually analyzed at least twice in the wet lab to insure that the test results were accurate and consistent.



5. "The "wet chemistry" sample data was used with the NIR sample data already in the computer (see step No. 3) to derive the calibration for our NIR Forage analysis system."



6. "The calibration is then tested, adjusted if necessary, and retested by analyzing additional unknown samples with NIR and comparing the test results to the wet analysis run in duplicate on the same samples."

This assures you of very accurate and consistent results for each and every sample that you submit to Agri Analysis every day of the year!

A. The NIR calibration is periodically tested and expanded to include "unusual" and "extreme" samples that may not have previously been in the calibration file. AGRI ANALYSIS continuously contributes samples to ISI/PSCO for this purpose.

B. Just as a yard stick can be used to accurately measure items between its extremes (1 inch to 36 inches) so can the NIR Forage Testing System determine concentrations of certain nutrients in products within the range of its calibrations. Expanded calibrations extend the limits of the NIR system and at the same time maintain its precision and accuracy.

C. Unlike conventional "Wet Analysis" that involves the frequent weighing and measuring of reagents and chemicals, The NIR forage testing procedure from Agri Analysis has very few places in which "Human Error" can enter in and affect the final test results.

Agri Analysis offers to you the fastest forage testing service available anywhere.
Forage test results are available to you in less than 36 hours.
They offer same day service on samples shipped by mail.
Free pickup of samples is available in Lancaster and Surrounding Areas.

Test your forages before your cows do. Their service costs you money. Agri Analysis service makes you money.

There's mounting evidence that disposal sites receiving toxic wastes cleaned up from abandoned dumps with Superfund money are becoming hazardous themselves, says the National Wildlife Federation. Rather than moving toxic waste to new landfills that eventually leak, National Wildlife says longer lasting solutions, even if they cost a little more in the short run, should be preferred under Superfund law.

THE TYLAN® TEAM. A UNIQUE LINEUP OF WINNING PERFORMERS.

Help keep hogs healthy and growing fast—at any stage.

Introducing the Tylan® Team, the antibiotics with teamwork that pays at every phase. To control atrophic rhinitis[1] or pneumonia,[2] or to boost weight gains and feed efficiency, there's a member of the Tylan Team that can help —at any stage of a hog's life.

Tylan products have proven to be effective over many years of use, and continue to be effective today.

Tylan® Sulfa-G™ is the only feed-grade antibiotic approved to control both atrophic rhinitis[1] and deadly bacterial pneumonia[2] in a pig's starter/grower phase. Tylan Sulfa-G also reduces Bordetella infections in sows and gilts, too, before they pass these dangerous organisms on to their litters.

Tylan® Feed Medication boosts weight gains and feed efficiency in growing and finishing hogs. At 100 grams/ton, Tylan helps by maintaining weight gains and feed efficiency even in the presence of atrophic rhinitis.

Tylan® 200 Injection is the active antibiotic that goes right to the infection site, such as lung tissue in the case of pneumonia. Use Tylan 50 Injection for baby pigs, and Tylan 200 Injection at any phase after that.

Tylan® plus Vitamins Soluble helps control and treat swine dysentery (bloody scours) caused by sensitive pathogens.

Get on the Tylan Team.

For more information, talk to your veterinarian or feed man. They can recommend a Tylan Team program, and help give your hogs a winning performance.

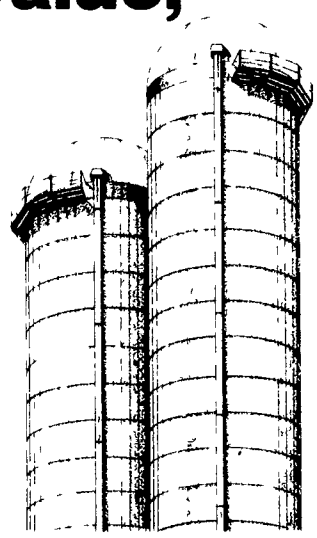
INTRODUCING
SILAGE PRO™
Silage Additive

Increases silage value, reduces risk

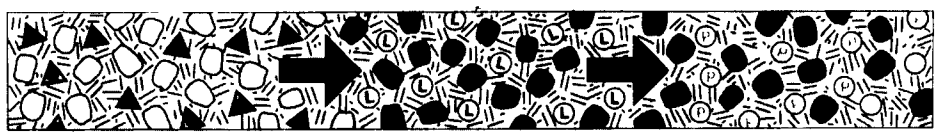
"No surprises... from first silage in to last silage out."



No silage additive works harder or more economically than Silage Pro to preserve your valuable silage. Why? Because Silage Pro contains enzyme catalysts that increase the speed and effectiveness of natural fermentation. Here's how Silage Pro controls fermentation to preserve your forage quality and quantity.

Uncontrolled silage fermentation

Can result in excess dry matter loss, excess heat and nutrient loss as Lactic acid Ⓛ is produced; and the possibility of secondary or destructive fermentation which produces smelly Butyric acid ◘ and rot



Silage Pro controls silage fermentation

Protects your silage by directing fermentation.
• Enzyme groups ⓔ promote rapid production of lactic acid
• Lactic acid Ⓛ lowers pH quickly, stopping nutrient loss and inhibiting harmful spoilage bacteria
• Heat is controlled quickly, minimizing loss of available protein
• Controlled fermentation promotes production of abundant Propionic acid Ⓟ, which preserves silage, and contributes to greater energy, greater feed efficiency, better animal health, and more palatable silage

M&W Two profit builders from M&W

Improve yields with the M&W V-Chisel by breaking the compacted barrier which limits root growth. The parabolic shank design lifts the soil to shatter it so less power is required. The rugged V-Chisel is available with manual reset shanks or automatic reset shanks. Both have reversible points. Coulters and gauge wheels are also available.

Improve profits by reducing losses in the field and in storage with an M&W Round Baler. The enclosed bale chamber retains valuable leaves while the bale is forming. Other balers which use belts or rollers allow these leaves to escape - you lose valuable nutrition. The optional M&W plastic wrap system provides an easy way to protect bales in storage. Several wraps of plastic are applied to the bale in place of twine before it is ejected. The outer layers are protected while the ends are left open to allow curing.

"Here's why I sell Bicep."

Bicep does a better job of controlling broadleaf weeds and grasses in corn and sorghum than most tank mixes. In field after field, year after year, I've watched them all perform. And I've had my customers come back, for Bicep.

Here's why I like to recommend BICEP:

- Weed and grass control that you don't get with other products or tank mixes
- The convenience of handling just one product
- And economics is the clincher

It's pretty interesting When my customers start to discuss weed control in corn or sorghum Bicep usually comes out on top And for good reasons

Farm Bureau program would expand commodity exports

PARK RIDGE, Il. — The American Farm Bureau Federation's plan to use government-owned commodity stocks to expand agricultural export opportunities will save taxpayers money.

Known as the "Bonus Incentive Commodity Export Program" (BICEP), the plan will use government-owned commodities now in storage as incentives to expand U.S. export markets abroad, according to Bruce Blanton, AFBF economist.

"The export enhancement program will be targeted at specific customers so new sales will be created and the bonus commodities will not interfere with traditional markets. In addition to attracting larger purchases, the program will also be used to fight those competitors who subsidize their exports," the economist said.

Any government-owned commodities that are not needed for other government programs will be eligible for the export enhancement program as proposed in HR1965 and S908, current farm program legislation developed by the Farm Bureau.

Blanton said BICEP is "cost-effective" because using a certain amount of the commodities avoids future storage cost payments. Estimating future storage costs, the economist for the nation's largest farm organization said a bonus commodity ratio of five to one could be used for wheat and cotton while the ratio could be four to one for corn and rice.

"If a customer buys an additional five bushels of wheat from the U.S., a sixth bushel is free," Blanton explained. "If a new customer makes a similar purchase from the U.S. rather than from a subsidizing competitor, the bonus applies."

Legislation being considered requires the Secretary of Agriculture to use one-third of available excess commodities as export incentives. Blanton estimated that in 1986, the first year of the program under proposed laws, at least 21.2 million bushels of wheat, 14.5 million bushels of corn, 1.2 million hundredweight of rice and 55,000 bales of cotton would be used in the program.

"Over a two-year period, the bonus incentive commodity export program will pay for itself through reduced storage costs. Also, U.S. farmers will regain export share, moving more commodities and providing more potential for profit," the economist said.

Policy and rural areas

NEWARK, De. – Short-term government assistance to farms stressed by high interest rates and heavy debt is a subject of heated debate today, both in Congress and around the nation.

The interdependence of farmers and their communities is one factor which is often overlooked in these debates, according to University of Delaware extension community resource development specialist Daniel S. Kuennen.

"Off-farm income is keeping many farmers in business," he says. "Net farm income dropped almost 50 percent from 1981 to 1983. During that time, off-farm income amounted to about six and a half times as much as government payments, even with increased payments through the PIK program. A farm that stays in business remains an active part of the local economy. When other businesses in a rural community fail due to agricultural losses, off-farm income may in turn be endangered, creating a negative spiral."

Currently, conditions are worst in the Midwest, where farm-based banks and Main Street businesses are closing in great numbers. Twenty-five of the record 79 banks that failed last year were farm banks. The plight of mid-western farmers and its effect on the local economy have lessons for other parts of the U.S., Kuennen says.

For instance, more than a third of Delaware's farmers report working 200 days or more off the farm. Statewide, farm households had an average income of just over $25,700 in 1980. Of that amount only $9,000, or 35 percent, came from farming. "Some Delaware farmers depend on the diversity of their income," Kuennen stresses.

Medium-sized farms with annual sales of $40,000 to $200,000 appear to be the hardest hit nationally by the present economic crisis. The average Delaware farm fails easily within this range, at about $126,000 gross sales per farm in 1983, according to Delaware Department of Agriculture statistics.

The farm and the community depend on each other. Government payments to farmers have increased considerably in recent years, Kuennen says, but still represent a relatively small portion of farm household income. Off-farm employment, on the other hand, brings in an amount greater than the net farm income, both nationally and in Delaware.

Rural businesses depend on the financial health of farmers to survive, Kuennen says. Rural development and farm policy should reflect this interdependence.

THE RESISTANCE IS SPREADING!

Fight the Colorado Potato Beetle resistance with rotenone-based Penick Noxfire and PBO or new pre-mixed PB-NOX.

The most destructive pest your potato crop will ever have to face is back in your own backyard.

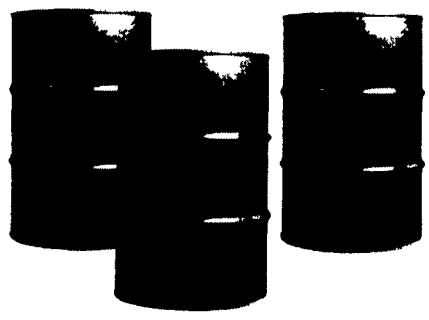
The Colorado Potato Beetle's built-up resistance to pyrethroid-based insecticides is costing potato farmers in your area and throughout the country millions of dollars in lost yields each year.

But there is a way to stop them dead.

Its Penick's new rotenone-based PB-NOX, the convenient, ready-mixed combination of two federally registered Penick products that proved to be so effective against pyrethroid-resistant Colorado Potato Beetles last year.

Now you can reduce losses due to spillage or mixing errors and get maximum acreage protection with super effective Noxfire® insecticide with 5% rotenone pre-mixed with Penick's piperonyl butoxide 92% emulsified concentrate.

Or, purchase the same ingredients separately in 1, 5, 30 or 55 gallon containers and mix your own.



Either way you'll stop the Colorado Potato Beetle's spreading resistance in your acreage and erosion of your profits.

Hit 'em with the most economical and effective protection you can get against resistant Colorado Potato Beetles.

Hit'em with new PB-NOX or Noxfire and PBO and knock 'em dead.

For more information or to order call your nearest Penick distributor or contact Penick Corporation Pesticides Division, 1050 Wall Street West, Lyndhurst, NJ 07071, or call (201) 935-6600.

Samson daughter strong-arms competition in Md. Sale

BY DONNA MCCONAUGHEY
Staff Correspondent

KEYMAR, Md – Bright, sunny skies prevailed for the Maryland Jersey Sale held April 28 in Keymar, Maryland.

This annual event seems to be growing in popularity with both buyers and consignors. This year's sale offering was one of the event's largest, and included consignments from Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York, Delaware, and Virginia.

The 35 head offered for sale averaged a strong $580. Only seven head were either springing or in milk, with the majority of the Jerseys being heifers marketed primarily as young show prospects. Several young 4-H and FFA members were present to select project animals.

The sale was topped by four-year-old Kalmar Samson Su-Senn consigned by Thomas Eliason of Harrington, Del. Selling fresh, she carried records of 11,420 of milk with 4.7% test in 305 days. This daughter of Gramhil Leader Sophia Samson sold for $1025 to Jack Kahler of Keymar, Md.

A Downingtown, Pa. consignment brought $950 for secong high selling position. Dorcas Bonafield of Centreville, Md., purchased this two-year-old to add to her small Jersey herd. Dorcas' herd presently consists of 15 milking animals. She has purchased one of the highest selling animals at the Maryland sale for the past three or four years. With the purchase of Henry Hill Samson Daydream, consigned by Helen McCahon, Dorcas says she has completed her milking string.

In addition to these two Jerseys, three other consignments brought over $800. Patricia and Elizabeth Jenkins of Toughkenamon, Pa., paid $875 for an intermediate calf consigned by Betsy Luchsinger of Syracuse, NY. A daughter of Bridon Master Monarch, this calf carries several "excellents" and "very goods" in her pedigree.

Lester Martin of Chambersburg purchased a two-year-old due in July from Waverly Farms of Clearbrook, Va. for $825. This daughter of Master Milestone C and a Surville dam was bred to a son of Top Brass out of a 20,000 pound Generator dam.

The Samson daughters seemed to be getting much attention at this sale. Another two-year-old daughter due on May 6, to the service of Favorite Saint brought $825. Consigned by Clover Hill Farm of Manassas, Va., it was purchased by Timothy Manning of Columbus, NJ.

Topping the Maryland Jersey Sale was this four-year-old consigned by Thomas Eliason of Delaware. Pictured are Margaretta Eliason, buyer Jack Kahler and Susie Heath at halter.

Top bid reaches $4700 at Erie County Calf Sale

BY NANCY KUNICK
Staff Correspondent

WATERFORD — Ro-Ka-H Mars Tina - ET was the cream of the calf crop at last week's Erie County Calf Sale. She captured the top bid of $4700 during the sale.

Glenn Darling, the new owner of the Tina heifer, traveled from Conewago Valley, N.Y., to attend the sale and purchase the July 1984 Holstein.

Consigned by Bob Henry of Union City, Tina has an impressive pedigree, with both the maternal granddam and great granddam scored excellent.

Her VG-88 dam, Cal-Bet Star Jolly Julie has a production record as a ten-year-old showing 35,414 milk and 1373 fat in 365 days.

Julie's lifetime production is a remarkable 249,000 milk and 9200 of fat.

The Mars-Tony heifer was one of 52 quality heifers to enter the sale ring at the Waterford Fairgrounds. Sale chairman Howard Hammond III, of Corry, described the consignments as "a good bunch of calves making a real strong lineup."

The second high seller, A-Jay Columbus El Mega - ET, was a January 1984 heifer consigned by A-Jay Farms, Spartansburg. The Leadfield Columbus daughter claimed a bid of $1800.

El Mega's dam, A-Jay Elevation Bootmaker Maze, is two times Excellent with a current record of 26,655 pounds milk.

The third animal to reach the $1000 mark was also a Leadfield Columbus daughter. The yearling was consigned by Richard Curtis of Union City and purchased by Howard Hammond III.

In addition to Curtis-Haven Columbus Bobbie, Hammond purchased seven other animals to make him the volume buyer of the day. Harry Firth, of Spartansburg, took home six consignments, and several other dairymen also made multiple purchases.

Auctioneers Jay Howes and Mike Weimer, of Backus Associates, handled the sale, which averaged $729.

Atlantic Breeders add four new bulls to lineup

LANCASTER — Atlantic Breeders Cooperative recently selected four promising Holstein bulls for the stud's young sire proving program. These new additions join over 250 other top-pedigreed bulls currently in the program at the Lancaster facilities.

David Longacre of Susquehanna is the breeder of 15H617 Acrelong Invincible, a Cal-Clark Board Chairman son. Acre is out of a Very Good Valiant daughter with a January cow index of +941M +50F.

Richard and Marilyn Packard of Troy also sent a Chairman son to the program. Pack-Herd Chairman Berth, coded 15H623 Berth, is out of a Valiant daughter with a January cow index of +675M +34F.

Joy-Dale Jason Junior comes to Atlantic from Dale Peifer of Kirkwood. Coded 15H621 Junior, he is a son of Twin-Lawn Elevation Jason. The dam of this promising young bull is an 88-point Conductor daughter with January indexes of +650M +33F.

Pen-Col Farms of Millville is the breeder of 15H616 Pen-Col Dignity-ET a son of Browncroft Jetson. The dam in this exciting pedigree is a VG-87 Elevation daughter with lactation credits to 4-2Y 365D 25,254M 4.5% 1,127F. The maternal grandam is Inka Whirlhill Pabst Della. This EX-93 Kingpin has eight records over 26,000M and seven over 1,000F.

General Manager Harry Roth points out these bulls will be randomly-mated by artificial insemination to approximately 600 cows on official test in the herds of Atlantic members. Upon entering the milking strings in these herds, their daughters will be evaluated for production and overall body conformation. The satisfactory results of these evaluations will bring the bulls into the active lineup at the stud.

Court orders store to halt meat sales

WASHINGTON — A retail meat store in Philadelphia was issued a court order prohibiting violations of federal meat inspection laws, according to a U.S. Department of Agriculture official.

"Rieker's Prime Meats was permanently enjoined and restrained from preparing, selling or transporting any meat products in violation of federal meat inspection laws," said Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service.

"The court order is important because any violations of inspection laws are now violations of a court order," Houston said. "If violations occur, the court can impose immediate legal actions."

The store was charged with selling uninspected German-style sausages to other retail stores and restaurants for resale. These types of sales are illegal, Houston said.

Retail stores are not subject to federal inspection if sales are made only to household consumers he said.

For Adams County's Dave Reinecker,

Variety is the spice of farming

BY JACK HUBLEY

YORK SPRINGS — To members of the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council, David A. Reinecker is best known as Pennsylvania's Pork All-American for 1985.

But a closer look at this energetic Adams County farmer reveals that a more accurate label might be All-Around Person. Here's a partial list of reasons why Dave can't afford to sleep late:

He is currently vice president of the PPPC, director of the South-central PPC and has served as a delegate to the National PPC for the last four years. He's also president of the York Springs Borough Council, and a member of the town's fire company and ambulance board.

On the sports front, Reinecker manages a softball team and serves as a PIAA basketball official.

He's also a member of the Bermudian Young Farmers, the Adams County Farmers Association and a 4-H advisor.

And during the week he's available for substitute teaching. "I've taught every subject in the high school," notes Dave, pointing out that his duties have included sewing dresses and baking bread in home economics.

"But he's not a good cook," adds his mom, Mrs. Mary Jane Reinecker. "He doesn't even know the difference between beef broth and dish water," she chuckles.

But he knows a good feeder pig when he sees one.

After earning a chemistry degree from Western Maryland College in 1977, Dave returned home to join his father Ray on the family's 150-acre livestock and crop farm near York Springs.

"I felt a calling very similar to what a lot of people feel in the ministry," he recalls. And as might be expected, Dave lists "diversity" as his favorite branch of farming, although he confesses a special fondness for livestock.

"My dad's a crops person and I'm a livestock person, so we've meshed well in that respect," he notes.

To augment farm income, Dave added a swine finishing operation in 1977, which remains totally under his ownership. He spends about 20 to 30 hours a week tending his hogs, with an additional 40 hours devoted to his father's cropping and beef operations.

With his father's help, Dave built his first finishing hut in 1978, and purchased three similar units the following spring. Each of the four huts contains two pens, with a capacity of 35 head per pen. All four units are elevated over a 16 x 64-foot manure pit. The pit's six-foot depth provides nine months of storage capacity, with spreading done during spring corn planting and fall barley seeding.

All of Reinecker's feeder pigs are bought locally, with about one-half coming from his uncle, Stan Reinecker, also of York Springs.

FEED EFFICIENCY

For the past several year's Dave has maintained a 3.1 feed efficiency, which compares favorably with the national average of about 3.5 to 3.6, he notes. He attributes much of his hogs' performance to good genetics and attention to feeder adjustment.

"You can literally lose a ton of feed through poor feeder adjustment," he emphasizes, adding that keeping his feed conversion numbers 10 to 15 percent below the average is vital with today's slim profit margins.

On the home front, Dave and his wife Cheryl have another "herd" to manage. What are Andrew (left) and Jonathan having for lunch? Ham, of course.

High Octane concentrate mixed with his own corn. During the summer months the corn is supplemented with about 25 percent barley. "Barley is lower in energy and higher in protein than corn," Dave says, "and in the summer the hogs don't need to produce as much body heat. So I lower the energy intake and raise the protein level to compensate for the lack of consumption. I find the hogs can stand the heat stress a little better," he observes.

In an effort to minimize disease problems, Dave isolates all incoming feeder pigs in the farm's retired chicken house for their first month. Worming is also an important part of his health program. And all pigs receive low-level dosages of Tylan as a growth promotant, says Dave, noting that his total antibiotic bills run only about 30 to 40 cents per pig.

Reinecker's management strategy, combined with modest financial obligations, permitted him to produce a pound of pork for 43 cents in 1984.

MARKETING STRATEGY

And in keeping with his ideas on diversification, Dave doesn't put all of his pork in one basket come market time. About half of his pigs go to Hatfield, with the balance being distributed among four local butchers.

Proper feeder adjustment is crucial to improving feed efficiency, says Reinecker.

Steers are fattened on a high quality barlage-alfalfa-corn silage mix. Taper-board feeder is a Reinecker original, with wood coming from the family's own trees.

Reinecker finishes 800 to 1,000 hogs a year in his four hog huts. With removable front and rear panels and monoslope roof, huts are easy to cool. Sprinklers located in the rear of pens keep floors cool in mid-summer.

Each market has different preferences, which Reinecker sees as an advantage. One market, for example, does a brisk business in pig's feet, so pigs with white feet are preferred, since white hogs are easier to clean, says Dave. "One of my other markets skins all their hogs, (as opposed to scalding) so they don't care what color the skin is. And I have another market that doesn't care if they're male or female; they just want lean." Catering to a broad spectrum of demands allows Dave to find the best market for all of his hogs.

Though the hog business is Dave's own enterprise, his farm chores run the gamut from fixing an ailing John Deere to feeding the farm's 125-head beef herd. The Reineckers farm 260 acres of corn about 80 acres of soybeans, 50 acres of barley and 10 acres of alfalfa to take care of their "grocery" needs.

QUALITY SILAGE

Corn to be ensiled is chopped off just below the ear to produce high quality silage. "It looks kind of funny to see two-foot-tall cornstalks in the field, but we want a higher percentage of grain to fodder," says Dave. "The cattle eat less because they're full of grain, so it doesn't take any more acres to finish out an animal."

And for the first time this year, getting those acres planted in corn will also be included in Dave's duties. Dave's father, who normally handles planting chores, will be off duty due to a heart attack that laid him low the day before Easter.

Like most farmers, Dave takes the long hours in stride, but he's not pleased about current commodity prices. Though hog numbers are down nationwide, prices indicate that demand for pork products is sliding, as well. Promotion is the answer, says Reinecker, a staunch fan of the PPPC's check-off program.

"We have to market our own product," stresses Dave, noting

HESS' HAMMERMILL

Hess Mills, with locations in Paradise and Unionville, has improved its on-farm grinding with the purchase of a newly reconditioned Hammermill from Eastern Mobile Mills (EMM), Lititz, Pa.

Hess Mills has had a mobile grinder for some time, but with an increase in customers, Jack felt the need to upgrade his machinery. Now, thanks to modern technology (and a few added extras), Hess Mills can serve more customers in the same amount of work time. In a word, Jack's Hammermill is standard...times 1½!

To explain further, the improvements on the standard hammermill are as follows:

1) The rotor speed has been slowed to one-half of its original speed and more hammers were added (40, compared to the standard 24). Because of these changes, less dust from grinding results.

2) A special arm has been attached to discharge feed into self-feeder bins for hogs. Now, the feed can be moved smoothly from truck to bin, no matter how narrow the bin. Also, a dust cyclone collects and recycles any dust back to the conveying auger to prevent loss

3) The hammermill, itself, has been mounted on a 3 -point scale. This allows easy and accurate measurement of weights of ingredients in a feed mix It's accurate to within 10-lb increments. Since you get out what you put in, no more guesswork is involved The 3-point balance also provides even distribution for the 'mill during the ride. The mixing tank holds up to 3000-lb. of fine feed and up to 2600-lb. of coarse; it automatically turns off when the tank is full, so no overload can occur.

4) A hydraulically-driven, 16-foot elevator for ear corn has been added to help get the corn to the mixing tank. The oil-driven elevator needs no electricity to operate and is lighter than a gas-driven model

For grain stored at ground level this elevator is a time and labor-saver The whole process is much more convenient and fast!

5) Hess Mills also added a special vacuum system It moves small grain from storage to the grinder The lead hose on this system is flexible. metal with a 3-inch diameter and it can extend 50 feet.

6) And since Hess Mills couldn't make any more improvements, some standard features remain the electric feed table lift (to raise and lower the elevator), the power switch on the diesel-driven conveyor (helps maintain proper engine speed for grinding while preventing overload trouble), the metal magnet and the molasses tank.

Eastern and Leprino announce protein premiums

BY WENDY WEHR

WAVERLY, N.Y. — Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative has announced the completion of negotiations with Leprino Foods Company to pay a quality and protein bonus to producers shipping to Eastern's Waverly and Horseheads plants.

Michael H. Donovan, general manager of Eastern, announced last week that qualifying Eastern producers will receive a 10-cent per hundredweight quality bonus. Those producers will then be eligible for a protein bonus, payable on percentage points above 3.3 percent protein content in their milk.

Stating that the premium program will begin June 1, Donovan emphasized that it is not the co-op, but the customer who is paying the premium. The program will provide better milk supplies and greater cheese yields for Leprino Foods.

The cheese plants in Waverly and Horseheads are owned by Eastern Milk Producers and leased by Leprino Foods. Eastern sells more than 700 million pounds of milk a year to Leprino, or more than one third of all of Eastern members' milk.

Eastern's cooperative relations manager Anthony G. Schlesier also noted that non-members' milk goes into the plants, but only Eastern members will be eligible for the protein premium.

Criteria for the quality bonus will include a standard plate count of 2,500 or less, a negative test for antibiotics, and a freezing point of .542 on the cryoscopic test, or measure of added water.

"All these figures are really stringent," says Schlesier about the milk standards, "and will substantially upgrade the quality."

While quality premium programs are not new to the major dairy cooperatives of the three federal orders in the Northeast, paying a protein premium is not common, particularly on the scale of the announced Leprino/Eastern plan.

"A lot of co-ops have been checking solids in milk," remarks Extension milk marketing specialist Tom Jurchak, "and will divert loads of high protein milk to buyers who can capitalize on it." The extra revenue, he explains, is turned into profits for the whole co-op, rather than showing up in individual protein producers' milk checks, because of the difficulty of tracing the milk back.

On a small scale, however, several protein pricing ventures have succeeded in the Northeast. One example of this is a small group of Dairylea cooperative members who have acquired premiums for themselves by supplying loads of high-protein milk to the Cuba Cheese and Trading Company in New York state.

Out in Federal Order 36, Milk Marketing Inc. has been paying a protein premium to all its eligible members since 1983.

The cooperative pays three cents a point for every percentage point above 3.2 percent protein, says John Siglow, manager of support services for Milk Marketing Inc., provided the somatic cell count is below 500,000. In addition, some members recently began marketing to certain plants under a protein yield formula that allows them additional premiums.

"We realize that three cents is minimal," remarks Siglow, "but we hope that it sheds some light on the importance of protein." The protein testing, equipment, and records that MMI has, he adds, will be helpful in identifying what should happen in the federal orders or nationally.

Siglow also says that MMI favors having an end product pricing formula built into the federal order system or implemented nationally.

Representatives of Dairylea and Lehigh Valley Farmers also say they are working with the National Milk Producers Federation and other cooperatives in the Northeast to achieve changes in the federal order system so that all farmers would be paid on the basis of fat and protein.

A component pricing system will, however, be difficult to devise in the high Class I usage markets of the East, says Jurchak.

But it is nice for the handler to pass part of the gain — from increased cheese yields from higher protein — back to the producer, he adds.

In its announcement this week, Eastern did not reveal how many cents per point Leprino will be paying for protein over 3.3. Schlesier did say, however, that negotiations are now underway with other processors to bring these benefits to as many Eastern members as possible.

Eastern's general manager, Michael H. Donovan, announced the quality and protein bonus program at a dinner last week that the cooperative hosted in Towanda for agri-businessmen of the Twin Tier area.

Prior to the dinner the guests were invited to tour the Leprino cheese manufacturing operation and Eastern's new quality control lab in Waverly, N.Y.

Dave Reinecker

that "Pepsi doesn't rely on Coke to sell it's product."

And like most farmers, Dave views the balance of the year with guarded optimism. Pork prices should top out in the low 50-cent range this summer, for a year-end average of about 48 to 49 cents. As for 60-cent hogs, "dream on" he says.

FARMING IS BUSINESS

But Reinecker refuses to shed any tears over the current economic situation. "It's easy to get caught up in farming as a way of life," he observes, "but farming is not a right. It's a business."

And he firmly believes that farming is the right business for the diversified producer. "The small, diversified producer can back off in one area. If feeder pigs go up, I can cut back 25 percent, but I'm still in the hog business without having a hog in every nook and cranny," he points out. "And if corn is high I can sell it. You've got to be flexible enough to take a profit when you see it."

But this pragmatic producer is quick to point out that he won't go down with the ship should all his options be exhausted.

"Farming is my life, but it's not the only thing I can do. Right now I feel it's part of my calling."

It's been said that 95 percent of the working public are unhappy with their occupations.

"I guess you can say that I'm one of the lucky five percent," Dave grins.

Dave Reinecker feels the small, diversified farmer's flexibility will allow him to compete with specialized factory-type operations.

Spring can drive you buggy

NEWARK, DE — Spring is the season when honeybees, ants, termites and many other social insects divide themselves to form new colonies. Exactly what triggers the swarming process is not known, but when people see it happening, they often panic. This is understandable, since a swarm may contain several thousand insects. One's first reaction may be to destroy them instantly.

However, the situation is rarely that urgent, says University of Delaware extension agricultural agent Derby Walker. The first step is to assess the problem.

"Carpenter ants and termite swarms inside a house often indicate the presence of a colony," he says. "These insects are short flyers so in this case it's best to destroy the winged insects with an approved household insect spray and then inspect the house to find out if you have more. If you cannot do the inspection yourself, call a reputable pest control operator (PCO)."

If the PCO finds an infestation, get a written estimate of the work recommended before having any done. Walker also advises calling two other PCOs for written estimates. Ask each company or operator for references and PCO license number to be sure they are registered.

"Even if there is an infestation, don't panic and accept the first bid that's made," the agent says. "Both termites and carpenter ants work slowly. So take your time and select the best offer. The best deal is not necessarily the cheapest or the most expensive. Read the written estimates of what each PCO will do for you, then make your decision. It would be smart to check some of their references, too."

Honeybee swarms are a different matter. "These insects are quite gentle when they first swarm," says Walker–himself a beekeeper. "As long as they're not disturbed, they won't bother you. The bees in the new cluster gorged themselves with honey before leaving their old colony to establish a new one. Since they're fat with honey, they're not likely to sting unless they've been hanging in a bush or tree for several days and have depleted this food supply. Generally, though, the swarm finds a new home long before this happens. It may choose an abandoned building, hollow tree, chimney or some other cavity."

According to Walker, most beekeepers are interested in picking up swarms which are easy to reach, since this is a good way to increase the number of colonies they manage. "If you see a honeybee swarm this spring," he advises, "call your county extension office or check the local newspapers for listings of beekeepers who will pick up bees."

Honeybees are valuable insects and should not be destroyed, Walker concludes. They pollinate many fruits and vegetables, provide beeswax, honey and even glue.

"If you happen to see a swarm, don't panic," he says. "Just keep children away, make a few phone calls, and in a short time your swarm should either be picked up by a beekeeper or will leave of its own accord. There's no reason to get out a spray can or call someone to destroy them."

Check plant

Before taking that planter to the field this spring, examine it carefully to be sure it's in good working order.

"Improper planting can cause costly production problems," warns University of Delaware extension county agricultural agent Derby Walker. "It's extremely difficult to correct planting errors later because it's hard to thicken up a stand without damaging existing plants."

If plants are weak because seed went in too deep or stands are thin, yields can be greatly reduced. Poorly planted crops tend to be weaker and are more susceptible to chemical injury, insect damage and disease, he says.

After checking the planter to make sure all the parts are there and in working order, calibrate it. Know how deep each row is planting and how many seeds per foot of row are being put out. Sometimes an individual unit will set seed a little deeper than the one next to it. Units wear differently, causing uneven planting.

While sowing that first critical acre, get off the tractor several times to make sure the planter is operating properly. If seeds are set too deep, seedlings may not emerge, or they may use up too much energy getting out of the soil and become weak.

"Considering the high cost of farming inputs and today's grain prices, replanting thin stands is an expense growers can't afford," Walker says.

Check fertilizer and granular insecticide applicators, too. These units must be in proper working order to use materials efficiently. Chemicals or fertilizer applied too close to the seed row may damage young seedlings. Under certain weather conditions, fertilizer salts may cause injury.

A planter which worked well last year still needs to be checked, since different planting conditions could bring out problems that didn't show up before.

Make sure the press wheel closes the seed furrow properly, Walker says. Any time the furrow is left open there's a risk of chemicals applications. Chemicals in the seed furrow can injure or kill young plants.

The planter may need to be adjusted several times even after planting the first field, especially when going from one farming situation to another. Planting no-till is different from planting under conventional conditions. And planting on black organic soils is different from planting in sandy soils.

"Adjusting planters to field conditions is one of the great management tools farmers have for improvinng efficiency," Walker says. "Not taking the time to do so can cost you a lot of money. The planting operation is the most important thing you do in farming. If a crop doesn't go in properly, you're off on the wrong foot."

"It will take longer to do the job right," Walker concludes, "but in the long run it will pay dividends in better plant stands and fewer crop problems."

Brian S Zerbey, a junior in dairy production and an assistant at the Penn State dairy barn, and Harold Harpster, assistant professor of animal science, won the independent milking contest Delta Theta Sigma won the fraternity milk chugging contest, and members of the Penn State Block and Bridle Club won the independent milk chugging contest

At the awards banquet following the Expo, Jonele A. Reese of Guys Mills, manager of the Holstein division, was voted the most helpful student throughout the Exposition, and Catherine A Carr of Pittsburgh was named the hardest working student Seventy-five Penn State students competed for top fitting and showing honors at the University's annual Dairy Expo last Saturday.

Enjoying their front-row positions at the rail, these young spectators take some mental notes on fitting and showing.

Dairymen seek surplus solution in farm bill

BY SUZANNE KEENE

WASHINGTON — The dairy industry is plagued by a gigantic surplus and dairy producers are seeking a farm bill that will work to reduce, and eventually solve, this problem. Of the many farm bills under consideration, most address the overproduction problem.

"Most of these bills feel they are designed to reduce production," said Charlie Shaw, ASCS, during an informational session at a USDA Farm Women Forum here last week

The difference between them is in their approach Some suggest controlling the surplus by adjusting price, while others recommend a strict, government-controlled base quota. "They all are attempting to get at the production problem," he stressed

Some dairy producers pointed out that in their local areas they don't produce any surplus, and suggested a regional program to solve the overproduction problem But Shaw disagreed.

"I don't think any farm bill can set up a regional program," he said "The dairy industry is a national industry," he stressed, adding that milk flows freely across state lines. However, he acknowledged, the production differences in various regions are responsible for the dairymen's inability to agree on one reduction program

The government purchases much of the surplus milk through the Commodity Credit Corporation, and distributes nearly 3½ billion pounds of dairy products through the school lunch and domestic feeding programs. Donations and give-away programs also contribute to reducing the nearly nine billion pound surplus

It's getting to the point where some people think the government give-aways are interfering with the dairy market, said Bill Paddock, Foreign Ag Service

With U S. dairymen producing much more milk than domestic consumers will buy and the government spending billions of dollars to purchase, process and store the surplus, why do we import any dairy products, the women queried. Six to seven percent of the total amount of cheese consumed in the United States is imported, mostly in the form of specialty cheeses.

Paddock reminded them that the imported dairy products are just a small part of the larger world trade picture.

"We get something for giving them something," he explained By allowing foreign countries to ship some dairy products into the United States, we gain some trade concessions in return. "It's a give and take in international trade," he said

The dairymen have taken their own measures to reduce their surplus problem A mandatory 15-cent checkoff per hundredweight of milk provides funds for a massive promotion effort Five cents of that checkoff goes to the National Dairy Board, whose purpose is to sell more milk

Preliminary reports of the National Board's promotion program's effectiveness, have been quite good, Barbara Curti of the National Dairy Board reported Much of the advertising focuses on the calcium content of milk and its place in a balanced diet

"The calcium issue is going to sell us a lot of milk," Curti said, noting that milk is in direct competition with soft drinks "We can make milk an attractive alternative"

Feds renew contract with Lewisberry horse center

LEWISBERRY — The Northeast's first and only wild horse and burro adoption center will remain in Lewisberry.

A new three-year contract has been awarded to Lewisberry resident Frank O. Goodlander, who since July 1982 has operated the popular facility on behalf of the U.S. Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management (BLM).

The new contract, announced April 26 by BLM Eastern States Director G. Curtis Jones, Jr., extends the life of the adoption center through mid-1988, and includes an option for renewal through the end of September 1989.

"Frank Goodlander and his wife Doris have beenproviding excellent care to the animals–and gracious service to adopters–for almost three years now," Jones said. "They have made many new friends for the Adopt-A-Horse or Burro Program throughout the Northeast, and we expect they'll make us many more."

In addition to maintaining the year-round facility on his Lewisberry farm, each year Goodlander will carry out as many as four "satellite" adoptions–temporary events set up in various locations throughout the Northeast.

"One of the keys to finding homes for the animals is to make it convenient for people to pick them up," Jones said. "The Lewisberry center serves a huge geographical area. Satellites will help bring even more adopters into the program."

The Bureau of Land Management has been finding homes for wild horses and burros since 1973, and last fall at Lewsiberry processed the program's 50,000th adoption. Herds of wild horses and burros that roam the public lands are protected by the Wild Free-Roaming Horse and Burro Act of 1971. BLM monitors the herds and their habitat, and removes excess animals when overpopulation threatens to damage the range.

Any U.S. citizen of legal use in his or her state is eligible to adopt up to four wild horses and burros each year. Applicants must have suitable facilities and at least some experience with horses.

A standard adoption fee of $125 per horse and $75 per burro helps cover gathering, processing, and veterinary costs. The animals are wild, but with care and patience can be tamed and used for riding, breeding, farmwork, show, or other noncommercial purposes.

The Lewisberry adoption center is located off I-83, about midway between York and Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. Those desiring more information about the Adopt-A-Horse or Burro Program should call Frank and Doris Goodlander at (717) 938-2560.

Canadian Ayrshire excels at Mason Dixon Showcase Sale

BY JOHN SCHMIDT
Staff Correspondent

FREDERICK, Md. — Thirteen Canadian lots highlighted a strong group of Ayrshire females at last Saturday's Mason Dixon Showcase Sale. One special Canadian consignment brought the highest bid of the day.

Miller's Jerry Snowball, a bred heifer, captured a $1100 bid. From left are: Kennard Henley; Des and Debbie Kayea, buyers; and Gary Keller at the lead.

Terrace Bank Merri Star, a 4-year-old consigned by Terrace Bank Farms, Howick, Quebec, Canada, was purchased for $1150 by Douglas Forrest of Culpepper, Va. Sired by Oak Ridge Star Man, Star is out of Terrace Bank Merri Lass.

Bred to Sous L 'Ombre Hektor, Star has a record of 11,102 pounds of 4.23 milk at two years and six months. Her dam's five year and eight month record stands at 18,283 pounds milk and 747 pounds fat at 4.09 test.

Also receiving top bids during the Ayrshire sale were Maple Dell Albi's Clappy and Miller's Jerry Snowball. Both consignments brought $1100.

Clappy was offered by Chris Hill, Woodbine, Md., and purchased by Donald Shetterly, Millersburg, Pa. The three-year-old is out of Anchor Mere Jacks Carnation and sired by Milaway Albi.

At two years and four months Clappy produced 13,005 pounds of 4.0 percent milk. Bred to Heb-Ayr Major, Clappy is also a show cow, having placed third in her two-year-old class at the Maryland State Fair

Also selling for $1100 was bred heifer Miller's Jerry Snowball Bred by Jack Miller, Bradner, Ohio, and consigned by Kenneth L. Kibler, Stanley, Va., Snowball went home with Des and Debbie Kayea, of New Holland, Pa.

Due to Oak Ridge Star Man, Snowball stood third in her senior yearling class at the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show. Sired by Tower View Jeremy, she is out of Miller's Just Snowgirl. The 85 point dam has a top DHIR record of 16,740 pounds milk and 737 pounds fat at 4.4 percent test.

Featured in the Mason Dixon Showcase sale were Ayrshires from Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and Canada. The 43 lots selling averaged $557.

Erie Campbell, who travelled with the Canadian cattle as the sellers' representative, said, "We are from a surplus cow area and hope to open new markets here."

Sale committee members Donald Baker and Kennard Henley expressed their satisfaction with the sale total. Said pedigree man Norman Hill, "I have never seen such an outstanding group of Ayrshires sold in this area."

Among the other buyers at the sale were a group of young Ayrshire enthusiasts from Howard County, Md. They dubbed themselves the "Motley Crue" syndicate and purchased Dreamnol Johnny's Patty, a junior calf, for $620.

Penn State plans Crops Day at Landisville facility

UNIVERSITY PARK – Scientists and staff at Penn State's Southeastern Field Research Laboratory are now firming up plans for Crops Day on June 18, John O. Yocum, senior research associate in agronomy and superintendent of the Laboratory, announced today.

"The Crops Day program this year will feature our work with forages and small grains," he said, "and even though it's nearly 60 days until field day time, our scientists and staff are busy selecting the experiments likely to be of most interest to our farmers. We think we're going to have some pretty interesting things to show this year."

The Landisville Laboratory, located on Auction Road about 2 miles northwest of Landisville in Lancaster County, is Penn State's research facility for study of crop production, protection and management under climatic and soil conditions characteristic of much of the farm land in southeastern and southcentral Pennsylvania. It is one of the four permanent off-campus research facilities operated by the University's Agricultural Experiment Station.

Yocum likes to point out that Penn State has been doing research in Lancaster County and surrounding areas for more than three-quarters of a century. The University started working there with tobacco in 1909, to better serve the region's tobacco growers.

Now all major agronomic crops benefit from the Experiment Station's program, and an expansion of its horticulture program is in the planning stages.

The Laboratory is located on 103 acres; 88 acres were purchased in 1956 and an additional 15 acres in 1981. "Even this does not take care of the Laboratory's needs," Yocum explained, "so long-term rentals have been made for additional acreage. And we're very fortunate to have farmers who cooperate in on-farm trials.

"This is especially beneficial for early testing of new management practices. Research just is not complete until it shows up as an improved practice somewhere in the very serious business of producing food," he explained.

The Laboratory is also a teaching facility. Students in the Graduate School working toward advanced plant science degrees may use the Laboratory for their experiments, and vocational agriculture and other school groups frequently visit the Laboratory to learn about food production and about how to prepare for careers in farming, agribusiness or the agricultural sciences. "We are always happy when people come to visit us and let us show them what we are doing," Yocum said.

Many Crops Day visitors will want to sit in on the panel discussions and question-and-answer sessions about the effects of nitrogen on soil fertility. "We also have experiments with grapes, carrots, and other horticultural crops under way, as well as cooperative experiments with USDA scientists," Yocum explained.

"Not all of these will be shown on the Crops Day program," he added, "but we won't mind folks taking a peek at them when they're here to see the small grains and forage work."

Crops Day visitors may tour the plots from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Lunch will be available on the site. Persons seeking additional information are invited to contact the Labortory (717) 653-4728 or Agronomy Extension at Penn State (814) 865-2543.

AM/PM Testing considered for DHIA recording

NEWARK, DE – Tight economic times are causing the dairy industry to look for new ways to save money. One option worth exploring is AM/PM testing. Under the official AM/PM testing plan–also referred to as DHIA-AP-T supervisors weigh and sample milk at only one milking. Weights and samples are taken alternately from the morning milking one month and the afternoon milking the next.

This plan is official only if an approved recording device (monitor or timer) is connected to the vacuum or milk pump. This device automatically records milking times, thus allowing the supervisor to calculate the milking time interval. DHIA-approved timers cost about $150 and are presently available from two companies–TESA Technical Industries in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, or Ohio Ag Services in Powell, Ohio.

Official AM/PM testing has a number of advantages for dairymen and supervisors:

* It's cheaper for producers, since AM/PM supervisor fees are usually about 60-75 percent of standard DHI rates.

* It makes possible accurate daily milk production estimates based on correction factors for the milking interval. Research shows that standard DHI is 99 percent as accurate as summarizing daily milk weights, while AM/PM is 98 percent accurate. The slight difference between the two methods has no practical significance

AM/PM is more convenient on test day, since sampling and weighing are limited to one milking.

* It entails lower supervisor travel costs.

* It permits each supervisor to service more herds, offering the potential of higher monthly income.

Two limitations of this milk testing plan are: (1) the cost of buying and installing timers; and (2) the fact that it's not yet approved by the Holstein Association for official DHIR records. This means it can't be used as a testing option for Holstein breeders who want to merchandize bulls or cows with DHIR records. However, Holstein herds in many parts of the country do use AM/PM testing as a reliable and cheaper management tool.

One question often raised about the official AM/PM program concerns the present requirement for a recording device. Some herd owners wonder why this is necessary for official recognition of records. Since the DHI program must rely on the integrity of supervisors and producers for other information, they ask, why can't the milking interval also be accepted on trust?

However, the national directors of DHIA have decided that for records to be official under the AM/PM plan, a timer must be used to assure that the interval between the last milking and the sampled one is 24 hours–not 23 or 25.

Herd size will probably be a major factor when considering the AM/PM plan. Owners of larger herds can rather easily recover the cost of the monitor in a short time. At a purchase price of $150, in a 200 cow herd, one should pay for itself in about seven months.

For more information on the official AM/PM plan and how to order recording devices, contact your state DHIA office or extension dairy specialist. Here at the University of Delaware, we have used monitors from both manufacturers on our dairy herd and they work fine. Because of its many advantages, I believe that the official AM/PM testing plan will be widely adopted in the not-so-distant future.

Dairy Promo Board approves $10 million ad campaign

ARLINGTON, VA – A $10 million, four-month extension of current national network and magazine advertising for dairy products was approved by the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board at it meeting April 19 in Kansas City, Missouri.

The additional advertising will run from May through August, 1985. In August, dairy producers will vote on whether to continue the national dairy promotion program.

The National Dairy Board's initial $67 million advertising campaign to promote dairy product consumption began in September, 1984. Current advertising contract expire April 30, the end of the Board's first fiscal year.

Previously, the Board voted $4.5 million for six weeks of ice cream advertising, slated to begin the week of June 17. This action brings the total summer effort to $14.5 million.

The breakdown, by product, for the $10 million is: adult fluid milk, $2.3 million; children's fluid milk, $1.54 million; cheese, $3.1 million; calcium ("Dairy Food Value"), $2.3 million; anad butter, $.76 million.

The advertising firms of D'Arcy MacManus Masius, Chicago, and McCann-Erickson, San Francisco, will handle placement and scheduling.

In other action, the Board authorized staff to negotiate and execute a contract for a baseline wave of advertising recall for the summer ice cream campaign.

York 4-H'ers win lamb prizes

YORK – Three York 4-H'ers took home purebred lamb prizes on April 27, after being chosen winners in the York Sheep and Wool Producers' Ewe Chain Contest.

Winners int he fourth annual contest are Sonja Shearer, Tina Shaffer and Amy Dutrey. The trio received their lamb awards as a highlight of the shepherds' field day and market and purebred lamb sale, held at the York Fairgrounds.

The Ewe Chain contest is designed to help deserving youngster establish a start in the sheep breeding business. Two of the lambs were donated by the local organization, and the Red Lion Rotary Club sponsored the purchase of a third award lamb at the sale.

Winners are expected to exhibit their lambs in the upcoming summer shows, and donate back to the organization their first ewe lamb, for use in future contest for other youth. Contestants wrote an essay on their reasons for wanting to be the recipient of a lamb award.

Sonja, 12, is the daughter of Terry and Gabriele Shearer, Abbottstown R1. A seventh-grader at Spring Grove intermediate school, she has been a 4-H sheep exhibitor for four years, and expects to show a total of five head this year. Her reasons for wanting to win the purebred Hampshire ewe lamb focused on the chance to gain experience in raising breeding stock.

Tina, 13, is the daughter of Donna and Roy Shaffer, East Berlin R1. She is also a Spring Grove seventh grader, and will show three head in her third year of 4-H sheep competition. A desire to start building a flock of purebred ewes and lambs of her own was Tina's main goal in trying to win the Southdown ewe.

Amy, 11, also was interested in starting her own flock, but favored a Dorset lamb. Part of her reasoning was that it was a different breed than that shown by her sister, and would lessen the competition between the two. Amy is the daughter of George and Sue Dutrey, Dallastown R3. Her Dorset prize will be one of two 4-H lambs shown in competition this year by the Dallastown student.

A judging contest with three classes, of various age groups, earned trophies for women's category winner Yvonne Trostle, John Eaton, Jr., who topped the junior category, and Doug Shearer, men's category.

Other finalists were, women's division, Susie Funk, Jo Geiger, Annie Myers, and Judy Waltersdorff; junior division, Jon Haggerty, Julie Myers, Jennifer Haggerty, and Sonja Shearer; and men's division, Troy Ness, Tom Flory, Joe Haggerty and Jack Ness.

High sellers in the afternoon market lamb and breeding stock auction were all consigned by Dallastown Suffolk breeder Troy Ness.

Copping the market lamb portion of the sale at a $147 was purebred Suffolk purchased by David Harpster of Boalsburg. Dwayne Bassett of Sunbury successfully bid $150 for Ness' Suffolk ewe and his top-selling lamb brought $90 from Randy Irwin, Freeland, Md.

The 33-head of market lambs averaged $58. Average for the 19 ewes was $72, while the three rams consigned averaged $71.

Winners in the sheep field day judging contest were Yvonne Trostle, ladies division, John Eaton, Jr., junior division, and Doug Shearer, men's division.

Amy Dutrey displays the Dorset lamb she won in the York shepherds' Ewe Chain contest. Tina Shaffer, left, received a Southdown lamb, while a Hampshire ewe went to Sonja Shearer, right. Dee McGuigan was chairman of the contest.

ADA/DC launches butter ads

SYRACUSE, NY – A new butter commercial has begun airing in 11 of the nation's top 20 markets. It is being funded locally by the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council in conjunction with the National Dairy Board.

The butter market represents a major opportunity for the dairy industry, since 75% of the spread market has been claimed by imitations such as margarine. The new ad represents an effort by the dairy industry to reclaim a portion of this market.

The ad is being shown in select markets throughout the country such as the Northeast, the Midwest and some Western markets. Research has shown these areas to contain the largest potential for increasing butter sales.

The themeline for the new ad is "Butter Makes Good Food Taste Better." Butter is shown in a number of appetizing combinations with foods such as corn, pancakes and crabmeat. An announcer tells the audience that "Nothing's more natural; nothing's more wholesome, nothing makes good food taste better."

To complement the ad campaign, a butter display has been developed for supermarket dairy cases. The display contains two banners and four price cards that show a variety of butter serving ideas. It will reinforce the ad message at the supermarket dairy case.

State compiles machinery custom rates

HARRISBURG – Machinery custom rates have climbed about five percent this year, according to information released by Greg Truckor, agricultural statistician for the state Department of Agriculture's Crop Reporting Service.

The report, compiled from rates obtained voluntarily from custom operators throughout the state, divided the state into two regions, labeled "mountain" and "valley" to reflect the differences in terrain, soils and alternative opportunities for labor. The state average reflects the arithmetic average of all figures received.

Generally, "valley" counties are those in the southeast and south-central parts of the state. The northernmost "valley" counties are Clearfield, Centre, Union, Northumberland, Mountour, Columbia, Luzenne, Monroe and Pike. The westernmost valley counties are Bedford, Cambria and Clearfield.

Dairymen, Inc. returns $16.1 million to members

LOUISVILLE, Ky. - Members of Dairymen, Inc. who market milk through their 16-state regional milk marketing cooperative were allocated $16.1 million in equity on May 1.

This allocation brings the total amount of equity distributed to members during the cooperative's 16-year history to more than $175 million.

Equity is the net retained margins (patronage dividends) and capital retains invested in the cooperative by the members, and is returned to the members after it has performed the important function of providing the necessary capital to finance the cooperative.

In addition to the equity allocation announcement mailed this week, checks totaling some $2 million were mailed to the Dairymen membership of approximately 7,500 dairy farmers. This cash payment represents 20 percent of members' patronage dividends which were generated by the co-op's business activities during the past fiscal year. The other 80 percent of patronage dividends are invested in the cooperative's revolving equity program.

The equity allocation to members was made at the rate of 26.6 cents per 100 pounds of milk marketed through Dairymen during fiscal year 1984. Members can look upon this current distribution of equity as the final settlement paid to them for the milk they marketed.

As was reported in the 1984 Dairymen Annual Report, members received $95.79 of each $100 of sales for milk marketed during fiscal 1984. Dairymen markets approximately 70 percent of its members' milk to processors of milk and dairy products in the East and Southeast United States. The remaining 30 percent is sold through the cooperative's brand name products, Flav-O-Rich and Farm Best

Dairy Policy Options for 1985: Mandatory Production Controls

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the sixth in a series of nine articles about dairy policy options for 1985. Compiled by Jack Kirkland and Blair Smith, Extension ag economists at Penn State, the articles are written by a variety of national authorities on dairy policy issues.

We are printing these articles to help you better understand and evaluate the policies and programs the dairy industry faces, and to help you take a more effective stand for the program you choose to support as the 1985 Farm Bill is formulated.

For further information about these articles or about dairy policy, contact your Extension agent.

BY JOHN W. SIEBERT
University of California, Davis

One way to reduce the government's dairy program costs now and in the future would be to limit production on a farm by farm basis. Such a program would cause major changes in milk pricing, milk production levels, and farm earnings.

What Are Mandatory Controls?

Mandatory production controls set quantitative limits, or quotas, on how much milk can be marketed by each dairy farm. Such quotas are usually set in reference to a farm's historic production level.

Under such a plan, any milk producer over the allocated quota would be priced at far below the cash costs of milk production.

This type of proposal is often referred to as two-tier pricing because of the tremendous difference between the quota price and the over-quota price. For example, under such a program, the quota price could be set at $15 per cwt. while the over-quota price is set at $1 per cwt.

The difference between these two prices could be used to pay the cost of disposing the over-quota milk. In this manner, over-producing farms pay the cost of surplus disposal.

Alternative Mechanisms for Implementing Mandatory Controls

When implementing a quota plan, fairness is always a difficult issue. In order to prevent a current production increase by farmers trying to acquire more quota, such plans are established using old production levels.

Accordingly, there will be many farmers who present reasons why they deserve a larger allocation of quota. A board of dairy farmers, or some other mechanism, could be established to review these requests. However, if too many exemptions are granted, then the entire quota plan will collapse.

Allocation of new quota could be limited to regions that experience growth in Class I (fluid) milk markets. This new quota could be allocated to existing producers or to new producer seeking to enter dairy farming. However, all such new allocations of quota will be small relative to the magnitude of requests for new quota – particularly if dairying is profitable.

Conditions Fostering Need for Mandatory Controls

When milk support prices are above the cost of production, milk production expands. Such price enhancement will overstate the true level of consumer demand for dairy products. Subsequently, if the government drops the support price, then resources cannot exit from production as easily as they entered.

Therefore a situation can arise where production is unprofitable for the bulk of dairy farmers while government purchases are simultaneously high. This is just the circumstance that makes a quota plan appear attractive.

The combination of shifting population, differing costs of production, and technological progress can also cause pressures for the adoption of mandatory controls.

Due to migration, one region may experience growth in demand even when national demand is shrinking. Furthermore, due to favorable conditions, producers in one region may find it profitable to expand while those in another region do not.

Finally, as milk production per cow increases, fewer cows and fewer farms may be needed in the future. Such potential for major structural change, where some producers lose and others gain, causes the disadvantaged to pressure for the adoption of a quota plan which would protect the status quo.

Consequences of Mandatory Controls

The implementation of mandatory controls would substantially reduce government costs now and in the future. Those farmers who received a production base would have their future profitability practically guaranteed.

In the view of many dairy farmers, this guarantee is the main appeal of a quota plan. However, as a consequence farmers would lose their freedom to risk expanding their milk production.

The implementation of a quota plan would make it difficult for the government to set a reasonable price for milk. It is likely that without the barometer of government purchases, the price of milk would be set too high. Consumers would then pay more for dairy products.

In general, this would reduce the ability of dairy products to compete against other foods for a share of the consumers' dollar. Specifically, it would also speed the acceptance of substitute dairy products many from casein and soybean proteins. Thus an incentive would be created for the further tightening of quotas as well as tighter import controls.

Past experience with quotas shows that they may not always reduce production to the extent desired. If the price of milk produced beyond the base is extremely low, then producers already in an expansion mode may continue to slightly exceed their limit. This has been the case in Ontario, Canada.

Even when the price for over-quota milk is less than $1 per cwt., expansion has continued on some farms. Of course, as reflected in that $1 price, these Canadian farmers are made to pay the full costs of disposing their own excess milk.

A decision would have to be made concerning the transferability of quota from producer to producer. If no transfers are allowed and the quota is tied to the farm, then efficient farms will have little opportunity to grow. Also, regions with growing population will need to be serviced by distant milk supplies.

The quota will take on a capitalized value. If no transfers are allowed, then all farms will have a market value far in excess of their production value due to the existence of quota. On the other hand, if transfers are allowed, then the quota itself will acquire an asset value.

In either case, the creation of quota can be viewed as a tax levied by the present generation of dairy farmers upon consumers and upon the future generation of dairy farmers.

The implementation of a quota plan would cause interregional tensions. The producers in each region would know that their own economic situation would be improved only if the production of another region were forcibly reduced.

In this environment, producer energies are no longer focused on the future health of the entire dairy industry. Instead the focus becomes their own percentage share of the economic pie. Progress and cooperation thus become difficult.

A national quota plan could not reduce regional production in exact conformity with regional demand. Therefore, in regions where production is reduced below consumption, milk movement between regions becomes more important than in earlier times when surplus production was common.

In order to induce milk movement to market, milk prices might be increased in deficit regions. Hence, farmers in these regions would then be able to profitably buy quota from farmers in surplus regions.

On the other hand, quota purchasers could flow in the opposite direction if surplus area producers did not receive a low enough price for their milk. Either way, this would eventually fuel interregional tensions over the fairness of a national quota plan.

Balanced budget

in a position to take advantage of that situation. With the strong dollar creating problems in the foreign market at this time, Stolte stressed that the United States must develop effective trade and production policies.

He recently visited the Soviet Union where he found a great concern over access to U.S. markets. "We don't give them equal access to our markets, and it's hard to keep our customers that way," Stolte noted.

In addition to their shared concerns about world trade and a balanced budget, panel members communicated special interests and goals for their separate commodities.

Mary Thatcher of the American Farm Bureau noted that her organization has been concentrating efforts on writing its own farm bill. The Bureau's plan ties commodity loans for major export crops and dairy supports to formulas based on market prices and sets target prices at 1985 levels until 1987.

The Farm Bureau is also working toward a reduced deficit and balanced budget, a goal it considers more important than the farm bill.

Darwin Stolte, U.S. Feed Grains Council, said its goal is to create demand for grain products and noted that Japan is the top market, importing 14 billion metric tons of feed grains a year.

Margie Williams, National Association of Wheat Growers, said wheat growers have spent the past two years developing a policy on the farm bill. They are striving to reduce excess supply and would like to see target prices continue at the present levels. They too, like the Feed Grains Council, are working to develop Third World markets.

Laurie Sentelik, American Soybean Association, said the soybean growers would like to see the farm bill focus on export markets. Soybean farmers exported $8 billion of their products last year.

Tom Cook, National Cattlemen's Association, said cutting the deficit is a high priority for cattlemen. They are also working to lower trade barriers in an effort to expand foreign trade.

Joseph Westwater, National Dairy Board, noted that dairymen are concerned with expanding domestic markets and are focusing their efforts on advertising and milk promotion. "If we can sell one more glass of milk to each person every day, we can reduce the surplus," he said.

'Blue Genes' Sale features show-quality lambs, swine

BY MONTIE TAK
Staff Correspondent

CARLISLE – If Clara Peller of the renowned Wendy's commercial had been searching for pork and lamb instead of beef, she would have been well-advised to attend the Cumberland Blue Genes Sale.

She would have found feeder pigs, open and bred gilts, market lambs and boars galore at the sale held April 27 at the Carlisle Fairgrounds. Guest consignors Bruce Lemmon and Bruce Lemmon, Jr. and Robert and Suzie Leib joined with the sale's originator Ken Ketterer to send some 145 animals under the hammer.

Auctioneer V. Art Kling of Landisburg presided over an enthusiastic audience of 4-H and FFA youths and their families as they competed to bid on the animals of their choice. This sale was a unique opportunity to buy project lambs and pigs from performance tested bloodlines. Each year, sale animals have gone on to take numerous championships and reserves at area 4-H roundups, FFA sales and county fairs.

Top selling lamb of the sale was a dorset ewe sold to the Robert Claybaugh family, Sabillasville, Maryland, for $105. Lloyd Edris of Mt. Holly Springs paid $145 for the top selling feeder pig.

The sale total was $14,473 dollars. Fourteen bred gilts averaged $259, 20 open gilts averaged $146, six boars averaged $263, and 11 lambs averaged $93.

"I just think we were well satisfied with the sale," says Suzie Leib. "Everyone that attended seemed pleased." Mrs. Leib also pointed out the interest generated prior to the sale. She said she thought if the people who came to her Mechanicsburg farm to see the animals came to the sale as well, there would be a large attendance.

"We were tickled with the turnout," she concluded.

"Hey mom, I'll take this one," says this future 4-H'er at the Cumberland Blue Genes Sale. Show prospects were in big demand at the sale held at the Carlisle Fairgrounds on April 27.

slump, being affected by the inflated exchange rate of the U.S. dollar. The outlook, Manfredi said, is not good, with foreign demand expected to be down and foreign export competition stiffer.

Oil seed producers are also suffering the effects of the strong dollar on export markets, reported Richard McDonnell, Foreign Agricultural Service, USDA. A strong U.S. dollar coupled with record oil seed production and increased competition for foreign markets has caused U S oil seed exports to decrease.

Exports for most meat animals will also be decreasing, but beef exports could be up slightly said Dick Crom, Economic Research Service. From 1980 to 1985 there has been excess supply While meat consumption per capita is up, prices have been low but stable. Generally, producers have been getting higher net incomes, but poultry incomes have fallen below '81-'82 levels

Sales for milk and dairy products are expected to be unchanged to two percent higher, with moderate increases expected in commercial use, Clifford Carman, Economic Research Service said While cow numbers declined slightly last year for the first time since 1980, the trend is not expected to continue.

Retail sales for cotton and wool have remained flat due to the general economy, noted Terry Townsend, Economic Research Service. Supplies are more than enough to cover demand and a larger U.S. crop has meant a moderate buildup of stocks with low prices Cotton production in other countries is increasing, Townsend said, but a poor cotton crop in Russia could result in an export market for the United States.

Running keeps York farm couple fit, trim and healthy

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK — On a recent, warm, sunny afternoon over 600 runners gathered at the Host Farm near Lancaster. Their destination? A 13-mile course through the beautiful farm country around Strasburg, and the finish line with timing clocks at the end.

When the tally of runners was complete at the close of the 1985 Amish Half-Marathon, a York County dairy farm woman had taken the eighth-place overall, and second in her age category.

Rather impressive for someone who was "always the last kid chosen for teams in high school gym class." But that's what Anne Grey remembers of her physical fitness level as a teenager.

A native of St. Joseph, Mo., this "city girl" is one of a family of eight children. In college, she met Martin Grey, also one of eight children, of a Hudson Valley, N.Y., dairy farm couple. After studies at the University of New York, he had heawded west with a football scholarship to the University of Wyoming.

Grey is now manager of Sinking Springs Farm, York, and farm director for WSBA-radio.

By 6:15 a.m., Grey and his assistants have finished milking the farm's 70 registered Holsteins. Donning running shoes, he and Anne head out the wooded lane for a morning run. They'll cover up to seven miles before they return for breakfast.

Running and farming can mix, as shown by the Anne and Marty Grey family. Two-year-old Laura is already a running enthusiast, as are daughters Alexis and Alison, who were in school during the photo session.

For Anne Grey the greatest reward of running is her feeling of fitness, and both physical and emotional well-being. Of the awards she has won, this one, from a race in which every competitor earned a trophy for participating, is her favorite.

No running without stretching first is the advice of Marty Grey. A tree in the farmhouse yard provides a handy spot for stretching calf muscles during a brief pre-run warmup session.

Both of the Greys are now competitive and hobby runners, and enthusiastic advocates of running as a way of maintaining body fitness and good health.

Grey took up running when he was 25. It continued his life-long interest in sports, which had included playing with an organized semi-pro football team.

"Heart disease ran rampant in my family. I took up running out of a fear of heart disease," he admits. "And I found that I really love it. I sleep better, have more energy at the end of the day, and have reduced my weight by about 20 pounds."

Anne, on the other hand, quickly jokes about her previous athletic activities.

"I had jogged off and on for years. And hated it. Any excuse, too hot or too cold, was handy. But Marty kept nagging me about my weight, and would almost push me out the door to go run. One year he even gave me running shoes for Christmas." She can laugh about it now, but recollects that she wasn't all that impressed at the time.

In 1982, after training for a couple miles each day, Anne decided to enter a race. Sponsored by the York YWCA, it was a five kilometer, or 3.1 mile, run, for women only.

"I figured I was really ready. So I got right up in the front of the pack. Pretty soon everyone had passed me. My time was horrible; I came in 82nd." Surprisingly, she found the experience to be great fun, and decided she wanted to do more.

Now, a vocal promoter of competitive running for women, Anne points out that this sport is the only one which takes an individual's age into account. As they grow older, runners naturally become a bit slower. Races break competitors into groupings by age, such as 30-34 years, 35-39 years, 40-49 years and 50 and over.

After the age of 30, few women run competitively, according to Anne. She cites one race in which an older female runner took part, finished last, and still won the competition in her age category.

Trophies, to Anne, serve only as a visual reward, while the real satisfaction lies in her improved emotional and physical well-being.

"I go run, run, run!" calls Laura, whose short legs must work hard to keep up with her dad's long strides.

She sees farm women as having a decided advantage in running, since they can participate in this sport according to their own schedules, and train in the countryside, with fresh air and few traffic worries.

Grey echoes his wife's viewpoint about rural running.

"It really makes you appreciate the beauty of the farm, a beauty that's sometimes awe-inspiring. Plus, I find myself scouting the fields for weed or insect problems, things we might miss from the tractor seat," he says.

That's just one selling point for promoting running by farmers, a group increasingly under the same stresses as other segments of the population.

"Farmers as a group don't get as much exercise, especially of the aerobic type, as they once did," believes Grey. "Studies have shown that farmers are subject to stress ailments, such as high blood pressure, anxiety, obesity and depression."

"I have thought already that running and farming couldn't be compatible. There's always too much work, or I'm too tired to get out of the house, or our schedule is too demanding."

"Yes," teases his wife. "He says that every time I beat him in a race."

And she does beat him, mostly on long-distance runs. In any race over five K., Grey readily concedes that Anne can best him. While he considers himself more a sprinter, Anne shines in endurance runs.

Both agree that it takes a full measure of will power and determination to get into running on a regular basis.

"Running can be real drudgery in the beginning. You have to set goals. But most people simply won't love it at first," they'll admit.

Anne suggests that beginners start out walking, and only increase running as it feels comfortable. Just getting established in the routine of setting aside time each day to run is a psychological hurdle, more so if the exercise is overly painful.

Running

Running, especially during a race, say these experts, does tend to be painful, although the encouragement of crowds along the way helps them ignore the ache during competition. Running, for both, though, has become addictive.

"Sometimes maybe it's too important," suspects Grey. "But it's become such an integral part of our lives that we don't feel good if we don't run. And when you feel bad physically and emotionally, if you don't do a particular thing, then doing it isn't a burden at all."

Anne is now running between 40 to 50 miles each week, and has found that "the more I run, the more I want to run." Because of his work schedule, Grey's weekly mileage totals less than that, but he does get out at least three or four times each week, running between five and seven miles each time.

One side effect of running he believes beneficial to farmers is that the exercise keeps muscles toned, and senses alert and responsive. That is a definite safety bonus, helping in farm injury prevention, especially when working around livestock and large equipment.

Cost of running, as compared to some other sports, is another plus factor. A pair of proper, well-fit shoes, is the only real accessory needed.

Summer garb is equally simple. Wear as little as possible, say the Greys. Like most runners, they prefer loosely cut soft shorts and tank-type tops for warm weather running.

Running in cold winter weather is not considered a health threat, according to running experts, although some participants may want to cut back somewhat on their total mileage. If breathing the extra cold air is painful to a runner, a ski mask or air filtration mask of the type farmers use to spray may be used, according to Grey.

Layers, rather than one large, bulky garment are preferred. Sweatpants, with a turtle neck sweater, shirt or sweatshirt, and wool hat are suitable. Insulating air is trapped between the layers, and a top item can be removed as the runner warms.

The Greys maintain a family membership in the York Roadrunners Club, an organization which promotes running for good health and enjoyment of the sport, not necessarily emphasizing the competitive angle.

Daughters Alexis, 11, and Alison, 9, are both interested in running, train for shorter distances with Anne, and occasionally take part in a local junior fun run. Even two-year-old Laura can often be seen sprinting up and down the walks around the farm's spacious, tree-shaded house.

"Running is becoming our family hobby, since we don't have any other specific thing that we do together as a family. It's a great diversion, and we talk about it a lot around the dinner table," Grey adds. "It also helps to instill in the girls the principle of fitness, taking care of your body."

All potential runners are urged, before they take a single jogging step out the door, to see their family doctor for a checkup, to ascertain that no health condition exists that might be aggravated by running.

Stretching and preparing the body for the exertion is an excellent preliminary exercise to running. Experienced runners make a habit of warming up, especially the leg and foot muscles.

Because distance running tends to make the leg muscles tighten, Anne finds herself stretching, keeping those muscles loosened, through the day. In fact, it's become such a part of her own personal lifestyle that she flexes and stretches muscles without even having to think about it.

"The excuse 'I don't have time' is the biggest cop-out of all. To take care of your body, you have to make time - it's that important," Grey concludes.

Running together, in the picturesque setting of Sinking Springs Farm and its wooded lanes provides a psychological boost to both Anne and Marty Grey.

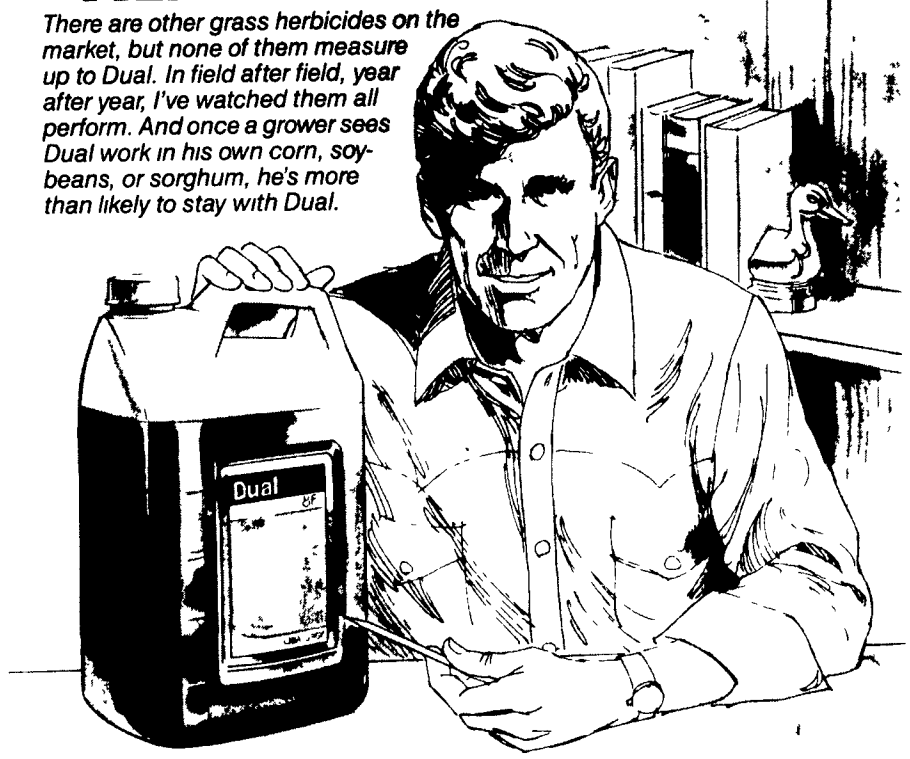
"HERE'S WHY I SELL DUAL®"

There are other grass herbicides on the market, but none of them measure up to Dual. In field after field, year after year, I've watched them all perform. And once a grower sees Dual work in his own corn, soybeans, or sorghum, he's more than likely to stay with Dual.



Why I recommend DUAL:

- Excellent control of the problems like nutsedge, fall panicum, and foxtails And it controls black nightshade in beans
- Lasts longer to keep late grasses from spoiling harvest.
- Yield Dual delivers excellent grass control which has been proven to be a key factor in yield studies
- Low per acre cost Because Dual rates are measured in pints, not quarts

Finally, I support Dual because Dual's the only one helping to get the farmers' message to the public on network television That helps all of us

4-H'ers travel to Harrisburg for Capital Days

HARRISBURG — Four-H members from across the state watched the inner workings of state government when they participated in State 4-H Capital Day activities on April 15 and 16.

Capital Days started with a tour of the Governor's Mansion on April 15. After the tour, separate groups visited the Departments of Education, Agriculture, Transportation, Commerce, Crime and Delinquency and the Treasury. Other groups visited offices of the State Police, the Commission of Women, the Judicial System and the Fish Commission.

All 4-H members participating had breakfast with their district's state representatives and senators on April 16. The legislators and 4-H members discussed local issues, legal developments and the status of the educational youth program. The main speaker at the legislative breakfast was Rob Sterling, a New York state 4-H alumnus and the current Penn State Nittany Lion mascot.

State Capital days is part of Penn State's Cooperative Extension Service youth citizenship program. Since the annual trip was established in 1966, more than 3,900 state 4-H members have participated.

Place liver slices on top of vegetables; sprinkle salt and pepper over liver and add wine. Cook slowly, covered, 20 minutes or until liver is tender, turning occasionally. Remove liver to cutting board; remove bay leaf and discard. Blend vegetables and liquid in electric blender at high speed until smooth; return to frying pan. Cut liver in strips about ½ inch wide and 1½ to 2 inches long. Add liver strips and pimiento to vegetable puree and heat 1 to 2 minutes. Serve on cooked rice, if desired. Yield: 4 servings.

Featured Recipe

This week's featured recipe comes from Ruthann Lefever of Columbia. Ruthann and her husband, Paul, raise 3½ acres of asparagus at their Manor Township home.

Ruthann says she makes this cream of asparagus soup without the onion, and adds more milk than the recipe calls for because her family prefers a thinner consistency.

To learn more about the Lefevers and raising asparagus, see the story featuring them in this section.

Cream of Asparagus Soup

2 pounds asparagus, chopped
1 small onion
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 quart milk
Salt and pepper.

Cook the chopped asparagus for 20 minutes in salt water; drain and mash. Saute minced onion in 1 tablespoon butter and set aside. While asparagus cooks, melt 3 tablespoons butter in saucepan, add the flour and milk to make a cream sauce. Add the onion to mashed asparagus, then add cream sauce to asparagus and onion. Add salt and pepper to taste. Heat and serve.

Lower Dauphin FFA plants demonstration plot

HUMMELSTOWN — The Lower Dauphin FFA Chapter recently planted their five-acre demonstration plot with three different varieties of oats using two different tillage practices. Evaluation of how well each variety performs under the different types of tillage will be taken later on this season.

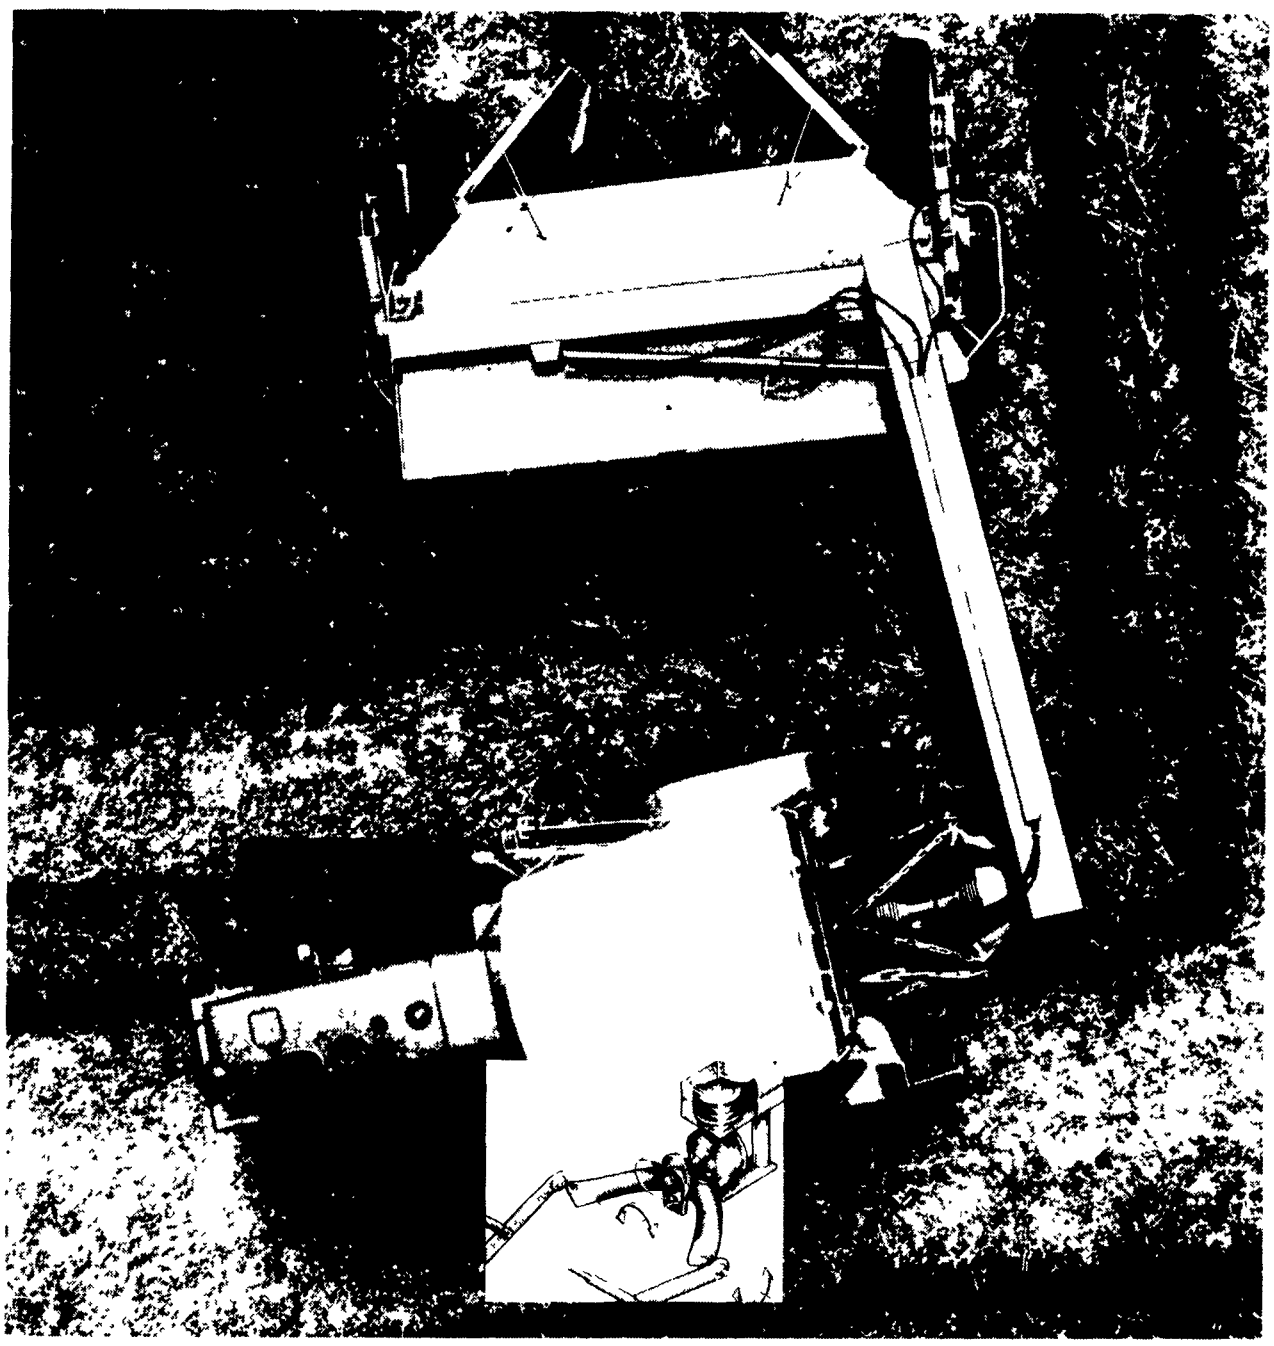
Local farmers are encouraged to visit the demonstration plot located along Quarry Road, near the Li-Lo Apartments, in Hummelstown. The demonstration plot is conducted in conjunction with the Soil Conservation Service.

The demonstration plot was divided into halves. One half was chiseled and disced, while the other half received no tillage. Three different varieties of oats (Noble, Ogle, and Porter) were planted in each half. Thus it will be possible to observe how each variety does under each of the two tillage practices. The field which was chiseled, was also sprayed with the herbicide, paraquat, before planting to control any existing weeds. Fertilizer (5-20-20) was applied at planting.

FFA members conducted all of the planning necessary to conduct this demonstration plot. They arranged for the seed, fertilizer, and herbicide. They also made sure that the field was plowed and sprayed. The FFA members themselves did the planting, spraying, and spreading of the fertilizer. Later, the members will arrange for harvest and measure the yields.

This "learning by doing" activity was aided by the help of many agri-businesses and local farmers. The seed for the plot was donated by both Jay Brandt and Muncy-Chief Hybrids. Chisel plowing was performed by Ron Kopp, and discing was done by Jon Johnson.

Part of the fertilizer and spray was donated by Farmer's Fertilizer of Elizabethtown. The use of the grain drill was provided by Umbergers Supplies of Lebanon, and the use of the tractor was donated by Gern Haldeman. Finally, the use of a broadcast fertilizer spreader was donated by Ralph Hoerner. Without these donations of time and supplies, this educational activity would not have been possible.



THE FASTEST MOWER/CONDITIONERS IN THE WORLD.

When conditions get tough, the Vicon KM 241, KM 281 and KM 321 Mower/Conditioners can get your hay in the windrow at least 30% faster than any conventional system.

One reason is the unique high speed Vicon disc cutting system. Which won't plug. And it's so gentle on your hay crop there's virtually no leaf loss.

The Vicon eliminates the most common cutting and conditioning problems, even if it's heavy, dew wet crop. The full width nylon rollers provides the maximum conditioning effect on the entire crop.

Another reason is a new drive system that lets you operate non stop. Even taking square corners with no drive line vibration or danger of failure. As a practical value to farmers, the Vicon mower/conditioners are efficient, economical and durable.

We'd like to show you how to improve your mowing and conditioning. Just contact the Vicon office closest to you.

Cycling sparks praise, rage and controversy

BETHESDA, Md. – Oblivious to the bicyclist coming up behind her, the gray-haired woman in the dark-blue Buick stops suddenly in front of a branch post office and double-parks to mail a letter.

The helmeted cyclist swerves to avoid hitting the car. He gives the woman a quick dirty look and swears under his breath.

Closer to downtown Washington, the commuting biker swerves again as another driver flings open the door of her parked car. "Watch your door, lady!" he shouts.

Neither incident is a cause for alarm to the veteran cyclist. It's just part of a day's commute on the seven-mile route between suburb and city.

His fellow bikers, too, are often flagrant transgressors. Near his office, he resignedly watches a bicycle courier run a red light, ride against traffic on a one-way street, whip onto a crowded sidewalk, and nonchalantly scatter pedestrians as he races to his destination.

SCOFFLAW COURIERS

"They are what I consider to be outlaws," William C. Wilkinson III, deputy director of the Bicycle Federation, a non-profit promotional organization with headquarters in Washington, says of such bikers. "They disregard or dismiss the application of traffic laws to themselves."

As in some other cities with traffic problems, District of Columbia businesses rely on scores of bicycle couriers for swift and efficient delivery of the tons of paper that flow through the capital city each day.

Capt. David P. Baker, commander of the District Police Department's traffic enforcement branch, says that cyclists in general – he does not single out couriers – pose a serious enforcement problem in Washington.

"We ask our people to rigidly enforce bicycle regulations," says Baker. Enforcement is seldom visible, however, and some harried pedestrians in downtown Washington say the police take notice only when they are called to the scene of an accident.

The 10-speed commuter from Bethesda is one of nearly two million Americans who bike to their jobs, according to the Bicycle Federation.

The federation estimates that there are about 75 million cyclists in the United States, about half of them adults.

The boom began in the early 1970s. Fueled by gasoline shortages and high prices, increased leisure time, and the growing fitness craze, bicycle sales have soared. Many purchasers are grown-ups.

SALES, DEATHS HIGH

Bicycle Manufacturers Association of America figures show that bike sales rose from 3.7 million in 1960 to a peak of 15.2 million in 1973, surpassing automobile sales. Nine million bicycles were sold in the country in 1983. The same year, says the National Safety Council, 1,100 cyclists were killed in the United States.

It's estimated that as few as two percent of bicycle accidents involve motor vehicles. But such accidents cause a disproportionate share of deaths and injuries.

"Unfortunately, more than half the bicycle accidents are caused by bicyclists," says Peggy Skonecki, government-relations coordinator for Bicycle USA, a Baltimore-based organization that lobbies for cyclists' rights at all levels of government.

The highest priority, says Wilkinson, "is to teach people how to operate a bicycle safely and efficiently in a mix with automobiles."

Washington's disputed claim of strict enforcement notwithstanding, another problem is police laxity in some communities, says Ralph B. Hirsch, a Philadelphia transportation consultant and leading bicycling lobbyist. "The system of enforcement that we have tends not to include the bicyclist in many places," he says. "Police simply don't bother to observe the shenanigans by bicyclists."

Over the past decade, the emphasis on the needs of cyclists has shifted. When the boom began in the '70s, the push was for separate bike paths and lanes.

Now it's toward coexistence with cars. "We don't need a whole system of separate bicycle facilities in this country, because there's a perfectly adequate system of transportation facilities -- the streets and highways," says Wilkinson.

This position remains at odds with that of the American Automobile Association, which advocates separate facilities. "Accident experience in this country and abroad has shown that mixing incompatible classes of vehicles on the same roadway increases accident frequency," AAA policy states.

At the federal level, safety standards for bicycle manufacturers, drafted by the Consumer Product Safety Commission, took effect in 1975.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Some time ago, a fashion firm came out with an exclusive line of garments. They were designed to fulfill wearer's dream of being part of the oil-rich jet set, patterned after a popular nighttime soap based on a Denver oil family.

Theory behind the role-fulfillment styles is that every woman harbors secret dreams of gliding down a sweeping staircase of her luxury home, dressed to the teeth, and casually tell the butler, "No thank you, just coffee this morning."

Thanks. But no thanks.

This farm wife is perfectly capable of scrounging up her own coffee, along with cereal, milk and toast, for breakfast. And do it comfortably garbed in barn-blessed jeans and comfy, baggy sweatshirt.

Klutz that I am, sweeping down a long staircase in a flowing house robe would undoubtedly send me flying to a nose-first crash landing, after tripping over a box of fishing flies and lone sneaker left halfway down the descent.

Living the oil-baron life just has no appeal to me.

But that part about the butler? Now that could be a real addition to our farm household.

How delightful it might be to sleepily clump down the stairs, throw back the door, and be greeted to the sight of an early-morning house already straightened up by a butler who rose at dawn.

Glasses smudged with traces of milk or iced tea, and bowls left from the previous late-night pig-out on ice cream, would be piled up to here in the sink. No way. The butler would have already hidden them in the dishwasher, after previously having cleaned out and put away the clean dishes from the last washing.

Wall-to-wall newspapers, dairy and cattle magazines, and library books would be what greeted me in the living room.

Instead, the wealth of reading materials would be neatly arranged on shelves, returned to the coffee table, or stacked up to await the next youth group paper drive.

Bulging gym bags which generally lie in wait to trip the wary at the bottom of the stairs or around a corner would have been returned to a proper environ. Like the back of the closet or carried to the owner's bedroom.

While I reposed at my morning breakfast, I would let the butler hunt for school lunch money, search for a misplaced text book, and referee battles over scheduling time before the bathroom mirror.

After I glided out to feed calves, his Butlership would magically erase milk and toast crumb residue from the table, straighten the desk, make beds and carry a rounded-full basket of muddy jeans to the basement.

When I returned from trying to convince a half-grown pig to exit a trough of milk so that his siblings could also partake of their breakfast treat, he would disappear into the kitchen to plan his day's responsibilities. But, when the morning mail came, he would bring it on a tray to my desk, along with a snack, and a single rose in a vase.

Sigh.

We all know doggone well that such happenings are about as likely as finding, on the shop table, the exact replacement part for a broken baler, on a day when 50 acres of perfect alfalfa hay are awaiting attention.

Still, wouldn't it be nice, just once, to lead your friends through a spotless house, sit them down to a delightfully-served meal, and not have to worry about such boring everyday household chores, because you could casually announce that famous mystery novel line.

The butler did it.

Cycling

RECENT LAWS HELP

Partly as a result of lobbying by Hirsch and others, and the interest of Rep. Glenn M. Anderson, D-Calif., the 1978 and 1982 Surface Transportation Assistance Acts contain provisions beneficial to cycling.

In 1981, the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials published a guide for development of new bicycle facilities. Federal Highway Administration standards closely follow the association's guidelines.

In 1982, the association designated the country's first two, and so far only, numbered bicycle routes. The routes, 1 and 76, are on roads in four states: North Carolina, Virginia, Kentucky, and Illinois.

Bicycle route designation and mapping have been perennially pesky problems. The Bicycle Federation has a one-year contract with the Federal Highway Administration to produce a handbook on highway route designation for cyclists.

Beyond that, most of the action today is at state and local levels. Skonecki waxes enthusiastic on the success stories of some states, and on the network of Bicycle USA volunteers working in many parts of the country to advance the cause of biking.

Asparagus - one of spring's pleasures

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

COLUMBIA – One of the true pleasures of spring is eating fresh asparagus. Although the season is relatively short, it is one to be savored and enjoyed.

Paul Lefever is in his fourth year of raising asparagus commerically, with 3½ acres at his home in Manor Township. Lefever explains that he was raised in a home which grew 500 feet of asparagus, and he would cut the delicious vegetable before and after school.

He started ¾ acre more asparagus this year, and hopes to expand in the future. But, he points out, "It is a little costly to wait three years without getting anything out of it." Probably for this reason, there is a good market for the vegetable. In fact, Lefever's wife, Ruthann, points out, "People have been waiting for it."

For Lefever, it works in nicely with his machine shop and raising tobacco, corn and alfalfa. In fact, he says, "Asparagus is nice work–it's better than tobacco."

It makes for intensive work during the harvest season. Lefever started harvesting two weeks ago, and says that the season normally lasts from five to six weeks. He mentioned that production peaks about three weeks into the season. Many people cut it until the longest day of the year, which is June 21, but Lefever says he usually stops about two or three weeks before that. He likes the stalks to have plenty of time to store up energy before they are cut in the fall.

Lefever explains that you harvest asparagus both according to length and thickness. He points out, "You snap it as close to the ground as possible."

Asparagus is a very fast growing vegetable once warm weather hits, and Lefever has a worker going through the entire field each day. He mentioned that when they started, they harvested 35 pounds of asparagus and within about four days they were up to 200 pounds.

Warm nights are what asparagus craves, and Lefever points out. "The warmer the nights the better. Asparagus will grow as much at night as in the daytime."

He said that if rain is plentiful, the average production will be 100 pounds per acre per day. Because of the extreme dryness of this spring, he has made arrangements with the local fire company to have water hauled to the fields. Eventually he feels it would be nice to have irrigation to keep an even harvest.

"Asparagus like dry feet but plenty of moisture," he explains. "They must have drainage." His fields are located on a southern slope which works well for him, although he says that "the books" recommend a northern slope.

Lefever sells his asparagus mostly by order with some sold wholesale. He also has a serve yourself business at home. He offers "pick your own," suggesting that people should come late in the afternoon for that.

Having a tight crown constitutes a #1 piece of asparagus. Lefever also sells seconds, where the crown has opened somewhat. This means that once the asparagus is harvested, it must be sorted. This is done late in the afternoon with his wife, Ruthann, once she returns from her full-time job.

She says good naturedly, "He waits until I come home from work." Then she adds, "I'd rather sort than pick." The sorting is done in the tobacco cellar by spreading out the asparagus on paper covered tables. Lefever and Ruthann deftly and swiftly separate it into grades.

Lefever points out that people have very definite ideas about how they like their asparagus.

Lefever grows a George Washington variety, Roberts strand, and his newest plants are a Rutgers synthetic. He said, "They are trying to get thickness. I am learning more about the fertilizer end of it, and I use more than I used to." Very thin stalks are due to too little moisture, according to Lefever.

He sprays to keep down the weeds, and said he fertilizes twice yearly. In the fall he uses a bush hog on the plants, then lightly discs it.

Lefever not only likes to raise asparagus, he also likes to eat it. His favorite ways are creamed on toast and in asparagus soup. He points out that it is easy to cook it right, and says it is not hard to clean. "Don't wash it until you're ready to eat it," he cautions. If you can't use it immediately, the ends should be placed in one inch of water and refrigerated.

Ruthann often freezes asparagus and says she cuts it into two-inch pieces then blanches it until it turns bright green. She said the most frequent question she gets from customers is how much asparagus they will get from a pound. The answer is that one pound yields two pints.

She also tells them there is no problem in keeping it if they can't freeze it immediately as long as it is refrigerated.

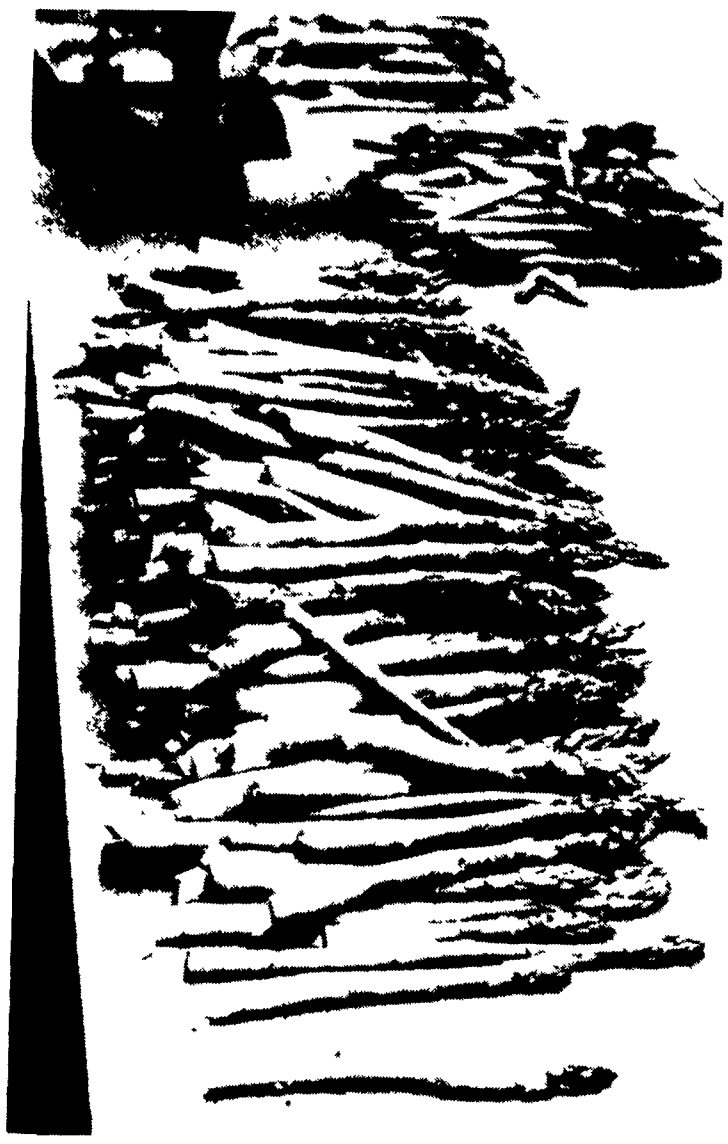
Lefever has planted raspberries and hopes to have pick your own with them. In addition he has a mulching business, but it is his repair shop that keeps him busy throughout the year. He says, "I like repair work in general." What he really likes, however, is when farmers come in with their own ideas–"something I never saw before." This is when his creative juices start to work, and he creates equipment to serve a particular need on a farm.

Lefever says he continues to ask questions and read about the best methods of raising asparagus. He likes the vegetable and feels there is a demand for it since most home gardeners don't cultivate it.

Every spring, the farm will be a source of the delicious asparagus–a sure sign that spring is here and the season of fresh, wholesome vegetables is upon us.

Paul Lefever, Columbia, demonstrates the proper technique for harvesting asparagus. He recommends snapping it off close to the ground.

Sorting asparagus assures the customer of top grade vegetables. Here Ruthann and Paul sort through the day's harvest, a job they do each day when Ruthann returns from her full-time job.



These piles of freshly-picked asparagus, are awaiting sorting into firsts and seconds.

Cumberland 4-H'ers learn reporting skills

BY MONTIE TAK
Staff Correspondent

CARLISLE – If your 4-H club is having a newsworthy event, how do you let the public know?

This was just one topic members discussed at this year's Cumberland County 4-H Officer's Training, held April 22 at the Grace United Methodist Church in Carlisle. A large turnout of members, leaders and parents participated in workshops for each office after watching a slide show on parliamentary procedure.

Reporters learned to make a favorable first impression by making a businesslike approach to their local newspaper editors. Do this by phoning to request an appointment because if you arrive unannounced, your visit may coincide with the paper's deadline. Don't even try to approach an editor at that critical time.

Consider if your event is newsworthy and timely before you ask for an appointment. If a major 4-H event is going to take place, you may want to ask if a repo[illegible] can cover the event.

If the editor asks you to provide coverage, present your work neatly. If you have access to a typewriter, use it and proofread your work carefully. Be sure your spelling and grammar are correct and your article covers the "who, what, where, when, why and how" of the event you are reporting. You may know these facts, but you must tell the readers.

Do not offer your personal opinion in an article. Opinions are the territorial right of an editor, not a writer. So even though you can not refer to a particular heifer as beautiful, you can discuss the qualities and points making her an outstanding individual.

You can be technically correct with your information but you need to hook people's interest with a good lead to your story. This can be an outstanding aspect of an event or a person speaking at the meeting, a simple statement about the event or an interesting or controversial quotation from a speaker or participant.

As a reporter, you must be accurate in your quotations. Do not hesitate to ask people how to spell their names because it will save you the embarrassment of making a mistake in print.

When you build your story, mention the major news first, then fill in with less important details. Keep your paragraphs short and stick to the subject. And because new ages fast, be sure you submit your work promptly. No one wants to read old news.

"The Farming Game," a board game which presents the pitfalls and risks associated with a typical family farm, was created by a Washington state farmer named George Rohrbacher. The object of the game is to amass enough land, equipment or livestock ($250,000), so the "weekend" farmer can quit his full-time job.

Farm women deliver "The Farming Game" to legislators

BY SUZANNE KEENE

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Farm women from across the nation trekked into their congressmens' offices on Capitol Hill last week with the intention of giving legislators a better idea of the problems that confront farmers every day.

With this goal in mind, the women hand-delivered copies of "The Farming Game," a board game resembling Monopoly that is designed to give players a taste of the risks involved in farming. Carolyn Leavens, president of American Agri-Women and coordinator of the game distribution effort, said she hoped the game would aid legislators in their efforts to write an effective Farm Bill.

George Rohrbacher, creator of the game, donated copies of the game to the Agri-Women for this purpose. Rohrbacher was a struggling farmer in 1979 when he invented the game shortly after his wife, Ann, issued the following ultimatum — either the farm makes money or we move.

The Rohrbachers had started farming on 20 acres of swamp in the Yakima Valley in central Washington in the early 70's. Eventually they were running 120 pair of Hereford cows on 1,500 mortgaged and 2,500 leased acres. But Ann was still working off the farm, and a series of bad growing years combined with low prices kept their profits to a minimum.

That's when Ann issued her ultimatum and George developed "The Farming Game" while baling hay. Together they refined the game to its present form and within six months it had sold out of production. To date The Weekend Farmer Company, which Ann runs, has sold 150,000 copies of the game.

The game has won acclaim as an educational tool and is used in a number of classrooms to teach students about the farm economy. In the game, players start out with 20 inherited acres and work to amass $250,000 in assets. The first farmer to achieve that without going broke wins the game.

The board is a map of the Yakima Valley, divided into irrigation districts where up to six players attempt to build their operations. The crops include apples, cherries, hay, wheat, cattle and corn. The gaming track is the calendar year, with a square for each week.

Along the way, players have the opportunity to borrow money, expand or diversify the business, and confront plights offered by Farmers Fate Cards, which add embargos, apple maggot flies and other maladies.

Because each player begins the game with just land and no money, he goes into debt $5,000 the first operating year.

The game offers insight into the often uncontrollable circumstances that affect the success of a farm. By offering lawmakers the opportunity to confront the odds themselves, the farm women hope the game will help them make better-informed decisions.

Farm women from across the country delivered copies of "The Farming Game" to legislators on Capitol Hill last week. The women were in Washington for three days to participate in USDA's Farm Women Forum. Here, Pennsylvania farm woman Noami Spahr, (left), and Gail McPherson, Penns Agri-Women (center), present a game to Suzanne Spaulding, legislative council to Sen. Arlen Specter.

Ladies Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas

Lancaster Extension Home Economist

HELP CHILDREN DEVELOP GOOD SELF-CONCEPTS

Those who work with young children are strongly in favor of having them develop good self-concepts.

Self-concept refers to the many aspects of how children feel about themselves. These include:

- How children feel about themselves as persons in relationship to parents, brothers and sisters, teachers and significant other adults and children.
- How they feel about themselves as learners.
- How they feel about their bodies, the clothes they wear, the house they live in, the toys they have.
- How they feel about the groups of which they are a member (sex, ethnic, income, religious, etc.).

Everyone's self-concept contains positive feelings, negative feelings and feelings of uncertainty. It is probably impossible for everyone to have completely positive self-feelings in respect to everything. What we hope for is a self-concept in which the positive feelings outweigh the negative ones.

The major way to help children develop more positive self-concepts is to help them focus their attention on what they can do, what they have learned, how they are loved and valued by their parents and friends and how their groups make them special.

For example, provide plenty of opportunities for children to experience success rather than failure. Correct behavior when this needs to be done, without condemning the child as a person.

Don't be afraid you will damage a child by occasionally "losing your cool." Children can survive some negative interactions without damage to their self-concepts. Try to have more positive interactions than negative ones and to change behavior in ways that will result in the least amount of negative feelings.

Show you children they are important to you. Spend time with each one alone, be interested in their help, give them tasks that will make them feel important, display their work around the house and repect their privacy and possessions.

CHOLESTEROL AND HEART DISEASE

Because elevated blood cholesterol is a major cause of coronary artery disease, Americans are advised to adopt a diet that reduces total dietery fat intake. The recommendation comes from the National Institute of Health in a consensus statement released in December 1984.

However, many people are confused about the term "fat." Fat has become a general term for what are really known as lipids. Lipids have three major forms: sterols such as cholesterol, triglycerides such as polyunsaturated fats, saturated fats and monosaturated fats, and pospholipids.

Cholesterol is not, therefore, the same as saturated fat. Cholesterol is a waxlike substance involved in important bodily functions and is found in animal foods such as meat and dairy products. It is not found in plant-derived products such as vegetable oils, which is why many manufacturers of vegetable oils quickly point out that their products contain no cholesterol.

Although vegetable oils do not contain cholesterol, they do contain triglycerides: saturated, polyunsaturated fats and monosaturated fats. The amounts of triglycerides present differs in each type of oil. Saturated fats, which raise blood cholesterol levels, are the major component of vegetable oils such as coconut and palm oil. Polyunsaturated fats, which lower blood cholesterol levels. are major components of soybean oil, corn oil and safflower oil. Monosaturated fats have no effect on blood cholesterol and are a major component of olive and peanut oils.

Doctors often recommend dietery changes in cholesterol and triglyceride intake because this will lower blood cholesterol in some people. Strong clinical evidence suggests that lower blood cholesterol levels lower the risk of heart attacks, heart disease-related deaths and other cardiovascular problems. To lower blood cholesterol, reduce your intake of meats, dairy products and eggs. Avoid saturated fats such as coconut and palm oil or products labeled "non-dairy" which often contain these oils.

Use olive and peanut oils. These contain mostly monosaturated fat, which does not affect blood cholesterol levels. You can also use polyunsaturated vegetable oils, which are liquid at room temperature, such as soybean oil, corn oil, or safflower oil. These products lower blood cholesterol. Use skim milk and skim milk products rather than whole milk.

Scout fields

NEWARK — In recent years the benefits of integrated pest management techniques such as field scouting, pesticide management, and biological control have been emphasized. Higher pest control costs combined with increased pest resistance have caused producers to seek new methods to minimize losses from crop pests.

An organized pest management program based on regular field scouting can help growers become more efficient in their pest control, produce higher quality crops, and reduce pest control costs, says University of Delaware extension pest management specialist Joanne Whalen.

Field crop producers are often concerned with choosing the right combination of pesticides to produce the highest yields. By sampling for soil insects before planting (to determine if economic populations are present), field corn producers can save approximately $10 per acre on soil insecticides and still maintain yields.

An additional $6 per acre can be saved by scouting for European corn borer infestations during the whorl stage of corn development. By weed scouting and mapping, producers can select the most effective herbicides and prevent yield losses due to weed competition, Whalen says.

Monitoring natural control agents can also help producers reduce pest control costs. In Delaware, says Whalen, apple growers have saved one to two miticide sprays per year by managing pesticides to encourage mite predators.

Knitters refine skills, donate time in Extension Volunteer Program

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

NEW BLOOMFIELD — One of the strengths of the Cooperative Extension Service is its volunteers. Literally thousands of volunteers make it possible to take Extension's message to a wide variety of people.

Last week in Perry County a small group of enthusiastic women became a part of the Cooperative Extension Service through its Extension Master Volunteer Program-knitting and crocheting. These 16 women gave 25 hours of their time for training and have each committed themselves to an additional 50 hours of volunteer time in the name of the Cooperative Extension Service.

The program, a first for home economics and family living in Pennsylvania, is a pilot designed by the United States Department of Agriculture's Cooperative Extension Service. Although there are programs in place in other states, and a few gardening programs in Pennsylvania, this is the first time it has been offered to homemakers in this state.

According to Perry County Home Economist Mary Myers, the only cost to the participants is their time and supplies, plus travel and lunch for the four days of the session. Participants are from Perry, Dauphin and Cumberland Counties.

Myers points out, "They are receiving a very high level of instruction." Cooperating in offering the program are the Craft Yarn Council of America and the Hand Knitting Association, and the instructor is Diane Howell, director of consumer programs for the Yarn Council.

This is not a beginning knitting course, and all participants have had previous experience. What the course offers is refining and enhancing skills, and helping participants know where to get resources and materials. There is an emphasis on instructing the participants in methods of teaching and showing them visual aids that they can produce themselves as they go about their volunteer commitment.

The course is a combination of lecture, demonstration and hands-on learning. Howell gives each woman individual help as needed, and participants help each other as they struggle with a new technique.

Howell informed the group of the very latest in equipment, and one session was devoted to a demonstration of the use of a knitting machine. A discussion of yarns and fibers was included and Extension Specialist Mary Saylor spend some time talking about marketing and pricing the items they produce.

Myers states, "We cover all phases and teach them as much as we can in 25 hours." Perhaps the most valuable part of the course is that all information is the latest available.

Each member of the group receives a "full resource notebook" which contains information on knitting and crocheting as well as where to get the most current literature on the subject. Each participant also received a tote bag and a certificate of completion. They will receive another certificate once the 50 volunteer hours are completed.

Myers is especially excited about the "multiplication effect" of the 50 hours of volunteer time each will give. She expects that each of the 16 participants will reach a minimum of 10 people. "That's 160 people just from this class," she says. How they volunteer will be up to each individual, though Myers will oversee and help them if they need assistance in making contacts. She will advertise their availability through newspapers and her own newsletter. Possible areas of volunteer help include working with extension homemakers groups, 4-H projects, churches, scout groups, senior centers, nursing homes and other one-on-one teaching.

Having completed the course, it is expected that some may wish to use the skills they have learned as an income-producing skill.

Knitting is generally on the increase, according to both Myers and Howell. Howell attributes the new interest to the fact that "more ready-to-wear clothing is knitted." Myers adds, "There is more and more interest in natural fibers." She said that because of the increase in small farming which often includes raising sheep and goats, more people are interested in using wool produced at home. She points out that in the last 10 years there has been an increase in the use of knitting machines which make it faster and easier to produce items, and also makes it easier to leave and come back to later. "There are many uses for knitted items" she concludes.

Myers says that the Extension Master Volunteer program has been around for at least five years, and includes instruction in areas like canning, gardening, resource management and others.

Participants seem thrilled with the opportunity to learn more about a skill they enjoy.

Erma Patterson, Shermanstown, says, "I've never made a knit or crocheted garment to wear. I have some of the skills, but I wanted to make it better. I have to concentrate very hard and shut out everything else."

Sue Montgomery, New Bloomfield, says, "I've been a knitter for a long time, but there are a few techniques that I don't know if I am doing correctly. I want to improve my knitting." She is planning to volunteer with 4-H groups and senior centers, and adds, "It's a very valuable course. I hope I have the patience to each others." She is no stranger to knitting, raising her own sheep, spinning and selling sweaters and yarns.

Another Perry Countian, Barbara Hench, Loysville, says, "I am learning a lot that will benefit me." Irene Seiler, Liverpool, adds, "I like to knit and this is just down my alley. There are a lot of things I needed to learn." She hopes to share some of her newly-acquired skills through the Grange and church.

Another would-be spinner is Cheryl Tressler, Newport, who hopes to get a spinning wheel for Christmas. She raises some sheep and feels the knowledge she gains through the course will be valuable. "I'm really learning a lot."

For the 16 women, the course means greatly improved mastery of the skills of knitting and crocheting. For the members of their respective communities, the course means added hours of skilled volunteer work, and a valuable community resource.

Irene Seiler, left, and Cheryl Tressler work on a new technique they have learned. Sharing information and suggestions makes the learning easier for everyone.

Diane Howell, of the Craft Yarn Council of America, shows a technique for making buttonholes to a very interested class in Perry County. The women are taking part in an Extension Master Volunteer program and will donate 50 hours of volunteer time after their 25 hours of instruction.

When you see a beautiful set of sheets, what comes to mind? A lovely bedroom? Not me. I immediately think what beautiful fabric it is!

I found a three-piece twin set (flat, fitted and pillowcase) on sale for $7.97. The fabric has a slight nub thread and a faint sheen which gives it a very luxurious look. I couldn't wait to get out my patterns and cutting board.

The first thing I did, of course, was to pre-wash and dry all the pieces. Then I trimmed off the elastic that ran all round the fitted sheet (I'm saving that for another project).

From the flat sheet I cut out the Missouri River Boatman's shirt (a Folkwear pattern) and six large dinner napkins.

From the fitted sheet I cut a wrap skirt (McCall's 8549) and a sleeveless top (Simplicity's 5445 — one of my favorites).

I still have the pillowcase from which I think I will make a summer nightshirt.

Would you believe it took only one day to make all the above? It's true.

If you would like to check out these luscious sheets, look for Cannon's no-iron Dura-Soft sheets. The fabric design I found was Cortina, but I'm sure there are others.

Your savings will be even greater if you look for designs that have been discontinued.

Why select sheets over fabric-by-the-yard? Two reasons come to mind — you get more for your money and the fabric is always durable. Do not buy low-quality sheets, you'll be sorry.

What else can you do with sheets? Curtains, of course, tablecloths (especially round ones, no seams to worry about); table runners; placemats; caftans and robes.

Have you ever noticed that pillowcases seem to wear out before the matching sheets? Instead of buying pillow cases, buy an extra flat sheet and make more than one pair (you can get three pair from one regular sheet). Cheaper than ready-made cases.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The calendar on the kitchen door has many notations on it. It tells us to remember this and remember that. Of course, we must remind ourselves to look at it or we might forget an important meeting or event.

The month of April was filled with a variety of activities. One Saturday I attended a sale in eastern Lancaster County and bought a big old Bible with a "family" name on it–Sprecher. It is one branch of the family that hasn't, to my knowledge, been researched very thoroughly. I also bought a teddy bear for my grandson to play with when he visits us.

One day I traveled to Reading to a bank's annual meeting. It is interesting to learn about the addition of new banks, their loan policies, services to customers and to meet the officers.

Another Saturday, I drove to Lancaster to a display set up by members of the Lancaster Mennonite Historical Society. I was particularly fascinated with the beautiful "show towels" that were displayed. Also of interest were the arrowheads from several different Indian tribes. I have inherited a nice collection but mine are stored away and even I don't get to see them. It wasn't possible for me to leave without buying a book since I do love to read, if I find the time.

One Sunday we had several couples here to plan a reunion of the Lancaster County Rural Youth members. Of course, we are no longer "youths" but there is still a strong bond among the former members.

And, my husband and I have been going to travelogues this winter and spring. It certainly is an inexpensive way to see far off places.

Each Sunday the past month, I've been the deacon who delivered the altar flowers to hospitals. Believe me it takes time to visit several different places in the county when some members are in nursing homes.

The next thing coming up is the wedding of our son in Pittsburgh. That will take some managing in order to leave the farm for two days.

THE MICRO WAY

LANI BLOOMER

Microwave Accessories

The companies that manufacture microwave cookware have come out with some wonderful new microwave cookware since Christmas. Any of these would make good Mother's Day gifts for a microwavin' Mom!

Nordic Ware has a great new line of non-stick SilverStone(R) coated "plastic" microwave utensils. The "plastic," a material called GEMSTONE, is safe in electric, gas and microwave ovens up to 410° F. These would be great for micro/convection ovens.

In the past, the "plastic" utensils have been much harder to clean than glass or ceramic cookware. The new SilverStone(R) coating makes them easier to clean than glass.

Some of the utensils in the Nordic Ware line are: a 12-cup bundt pan; a 1½-quart round baking dish; a bacon/meat rack; an egg and muffin pan; a 2-quart oval baking dish; and a loaf pan.

They also have a four-quart deep dish oval roaster (no lid). This is 9 x 11 inches, so it fits on turntables and in many compact ovens. (Now you can get a lasagna pan to fit on your turntable!) The Nordic Ware bacon/meat rack fits into the roaster too.

The SilverStone(R) coating is black, and the outside of these utensils are a pale gray color. They are sold separately for about $10 each. Nordic Ware also has packaged sets which will save you money if you need all the items.

Nordic Ware has had similar, but uncoated, utensils on the market for $2-3 less than the SilverStone(R) items. Remember though, these will be harder to clean than those coated with SilverStone(R).

If you plan to purchase any of the Nordic Ware utensils, check the boxes carefully. I noticed that some of the SilverStone(R) coated items were pachaged in boxes for the older, uncoated item. The only difference was a bright blue SilverStone(R) sticker added to the old box. Look for the blue SilverStone(R) label or sticker to make sure you have what you want.

Corning has some very nice cookware that is microwave–as well as range oven–safe. The ceramic French White line is a little more formal looking than some of their other lines. These hold the heat well to keep food warm and are easy to clean.

A new Corning item is a one quart Cook 'N Pour Pan which would be perfect for sauces, pudding, or gravy. This is a white cereamic pot with a handle and two pour spouts. It has a clear lid, can be used on stove burners as well as in the microwave, and sells for about $17.

Corning Glass Company also produces the PYREX line of cookware. I was pleased to see that the new PYREX measuring cups have handles designed for stacking.

Measuring cups make great "pots" for your microwave, and are inexpensive. They cost from $2 to $5 depending on the size. I use them for scrambled eggs, gravy, pudding, etc.

Now, if you're really pressed for time (or lazy!), there's a line of disposable microwave pans made by EZ COOK-IN. These are a heavy coated cardboard type material, and are meant to be thrown out after use. There are meat racks, flat roasting pans, round casseroles of different sizes, and single serving size dishes.

These disposable would be great for microwaves in campers and other vacation uses. The price ranges from about $1 to $1.50 per package. Each package contains between two and six utensils of one shape and size.

There are many "ACTIVE" microwave accessories on the market now. These are designed for specific purposes and change the cooking process inside your microwave.

Some of them, like the steamers or pizza ovens, completely shield food from the microwave power with metal lids and bottoms. The microwaves heat the metal utensils, which in turn heat heat the air or water inside.

The steamers steam foods, hard boil eggs, and simmer things without letting the microwaves reach the food. The pizza oven bakes a raw crust pizza in a "mini-oven" inside the microwave. The crust gets brown and crispy and the cheese melts but is not browned on top. Frozen pizzas reheat well too.

Utensils like these which completely shield food from the microwaves may take almost as long as a range to cook the food. However, a microwave uses less than half the energy of an electric or gas oven.

Other "active" utensils like the sizzlers, browning grills, browning dishes, or pizza crispers are designed to heat up in the microwave. These are preheated in the microwave before adding the food. The hot dish browns food on the outside, while the microwaves help the food cook more quickly than it would on the range.

The sizzlers, browning grills and crispers are like frying pans for your microwave. They brown and crisp foods like fried eggs, grilled cheese sandwiches, French toast, hamburgers, etc. Many foods will need to be turned over during the cooking time.

"Active" utensils cost more than other utensils, anywhere from $20-$50, depending on size, store, etc The ones I've tried work well. However, many people I've talked to say they don't use these utensils very often, and are sorry they spent the money on them.

Each utensil is designed for specific types of food. I suggest that you make sure you (or the person you're buying it for) really want to cook these foods in your microwave, before spending the money on them.

Proper diet necessary for fair-weather fitness programs

PITTSBURGH — The season that brings the running shoes out from under the bed and the sweat gear into full bloom is upon us. Running for various charities and to meet our need to make up for a winter of excuses is an epidemic this time of the year.

Judy Dodd, a registered dietitian with Dairy & Nutrition Council, is quick to point out that the casual athlete is often less up-to-date in a fitness program than the serious competitor. The result may be an investment in worthless "fitness" health schemes that proport to guarantee endurance and/or speed.

If you are re-entering the world of the casual runner or "occasional" competitor, there are some simple guidelines and limitations to remember. First, fitness depends on a year-round concern for diet, exercise and control of such factors as stress, smoking and alcohol use. Don't expect to "get fit" in a few weeks of training!

Second, at the current time, there are no safe and fully effective ways to guarantee your endurance will endure. There are products offered in the market place, each with promises, but many with some side-effects that are not worth the possible outcome.

There is little or no valid research on the value of many of these so called "performance boosters." One of the more valid techniques, glycogen loading (a method of increasing the carbohydrate energy stored in muscle), offers no advantage for short events or start and stop competition. And, this technique requires some professional guidance to be used successfully as just one of other considerations.

Endurance is the result of training and readiness! The casual athlete has certain limitations imposed just because of the less serious approach such a person has to meeting training needs.

Take heart though, if you have inclination or the energy to be a serious competitor. Most community based competitions have a full roster of "casual" runners. And above all, running for fun (providing it is fun for you) is a healthy way to burn calories, build cardio-vascular fitness, and even have a natural "high" as you compete against yourself!

There are some good nutrition guidelines to keep in mind both before and during any event (including practice)! The nutrition clue to performance is readily available energy. A current recommendation is eating a high carbohydrate meal about 3-4 hours prior to any serious event. Such a meal might be juice, pancakes, and a glass of skim milk; or vegetable soup, sliced chicken sandwich and low-fat strawberry yogurt. Pasta is also recommended, again with some sauce, a salad and low-fat milk.

The trick is to avoid high-fat foods since these remain in the stomach longer. Do include some low-fat protein choices such as low-fat milk, sliced chicken, or low-fat yogurt. The timing of such a meal is crucial since this determines if you will have the energy when you need it.

Some other important points include, avoiding most foods an hour before competition, especially high sugar foods such as candy or soft drinks. Such foods can even hurt performance because of the high sugar load on the system. And remember to drink plenty of water–the important nutrient to the athlete. Even if you aren't thirsty, drink 1-1½ cups of cool (not icy cold) water about 15 minutes before the event or practice. And have at least ½ cup of water every 10-15 minutes during the running time. Once you end, have another 1-1½ cups. Thirst is not the guide. The result of not following these guidelines can be dehydration, especially on hot days.

Juniors learn cattle value at mock sale

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK – It was your classic cattle sale setting..

A string of clean, clipped cattle of various ages stood tied, neatly numbered on the rumps. Potential buyers studied pedigree catalogs with information ranging from incomplete two-year production records to maternal lines with high index and Excellent classifications.

Fresh, aromatic sawdust coated the floor of the roped sale ring. From the sale box came the flowing sounds of an auctioneer in high gear, the sing-song chant interrupted intermittently with pedigree comments and the enthusiastic "Yep!" of a ringman spotting a bidding nod.

But not one single animal changed hands.

Instead, this auction was all of a learning type, as more than two dozen 4-H'ers from York, Adams, Lancaster, Lebanon and Chester Counties met recently at the York 4-H Center for a mock sale and junior dairy workshop. Sponsoring the event was the county's Central Dairy Club and the Extension Service, with animals supplied by the Tom and June Boyer family's Sunnybend Farm.

Before a single bid call went out, the group split into three sections, for a morning devoted to workshops led by area cattle industry experts.

Handling the auctioneering tips workshop was professional auctioneer Mike Weimer, while pedigree specialist Jay Howes taught the session on evaluation of pedigrees. Both are with the Backus Associates cattle appraisal and sales firm.

Michael Sleeper, of Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, led the workshop on type evaluation. All three put heavy emphasis on being realistic about the long term value of an animal.

"Don't get carried away with an animal that's fancy, but doesn't have a good enough pedigree for the long term," Weimer warned the junior dairymen.

Public auctions are reasonably good indicators of fair market prices for cattle, he says. Young buyers wanting to gain more experience in appraising cattle should get sale catalogs ahead of time, then go through and put a value on each consignment based strictly on the pedigree information.

Arriving at the sale with time to spare allows further study of the consigments on physical appearance. Juniors might see the practice as a sort of game, in which they try to see how close they can come to an animal's selling price through their pedigree and conformation appraisals.

Follow that up, Weimer further suggests, by talking prices over with others, evaluating why certain individuals might have sold higher or lower than expected, since "sales can be spotty."

Repeated exercises of this sort can teach the junior buyer fair price ranges of cattle, and establish a basis for a range of spending when an actual purchase is planned.

There's nothing wrong with waiting a bit before jumping into the bidding action on a potential purchase, says the auctioneer.

"But, get a bid in fairly early, to indicate your interest," he further recommends.

One warning to young buyers is to learn to pay careful attention to the actual price being asked, since part of a successful auction is getting the bidding rapidly moving and having buyers caught up in the excitement and rapid speed of the bidding action.

According to Weimer, an auctioneer will generally open the bidding on an animal with a call for a price in the range from the animal's appraised value, up to perhaps 25 percent over the appraised value. This is generally prevalent at the beginning of sales.

To help participants better understand and follow the quick-moving auctioneering chants, Weimer had the juniors warm up their voices with auction school tongue twisters and then led them slowly through the sing-song chanting.

Howes echoed Weimer's philosophies about purchases based on pedigree, and guided the 4-H'ers through steps in learning to read the wealth of information in catalogs.

Keys to watch are the last letter of the scoring breakdown, which designate the udder classification, age and potential useful life of a consignment, whether safe in calf, when due to freshen and last date of freshening.

If the animal is a calf with show ring use in mind, birth date is important. Maternal lines are important as well as the sire side, including butterfat and production levels.

Cow index is a measure of Matching cattle to their pedigree information, 4-H'ers tried their hands at price appraisal before the regional mock sale.

Beat blight with There's a better in store for you.

Plus better storage out of your yield.

That's why more and more potato growers rely on a full season schedule of Bravo 500 fungicide.

Nothing equals Bravo 500 when it comes to preventing early and late blight infections that defoliate plants. And Bravo 500 is just as effective against Botrytis vine rot.

It's first-rate control like this, along with proper vine kill, that delivers a better yield at harvest. A healthier crop going into storage.

What's more, Bravo 500 has a built-in spreader/sticker that insures full and even coverage for maximum disease protection that keeps right on working, even during wet conditions.

genetic transmitting ability which is becoming increasingly important as a sale value indicator. Attention should also be paid to contemporary deviation numbers, which indicate the animal's performance in comparison to her herdmates, or contemporaries. A management response comparison, the deviation level theoretically indicates that a cow performing over and under herdmates should do the same in herds with higher or lower averages.

"But remember," Howes reminded, "all the pedigree in the world doesn't cover a poor animal.

He also reviewed the standard information found at the front of most sale catalogs, spelling out the legal terms and conditions of the sale, who can bid, and listing guarantees.

One general dairy sale catalog agreement, for instance, is that any animal selling fresh within the 90 days prior to the sale is assumed to be a breeder.

Determining the physical conformation qualities of an animal can best be done by using available type evaluation tools, says Michael Sleeper of Atlantic Breeders.

The Dairy Cow Unified Scorecard, a cattle judging basic guide to characteristics, is one of hisz recommended items for type evaluation. Scorecard assessment of individuals is broken down into four separate categories: general apperance, dairy character, body capacity and udder. In the actual scoring under this system, udder and general appearance get prime attention.
attention.

"Start with udder," advises Sleeper. "No udder–no cow. Then, go to evaluating legs and feet, and on into other characteristics from there."

Another handy type evaluation tool is the linear system, a listing in picture or graph form of how an animal compares to the ideal. Sleeper suggests studying the linear breakdowns of animals in the herd at home, if available, by comparing each physical characteristic of the animal to how it is ranked on her linear assessment.

Like the other seminar leaders, he urged the juniors to consider that "there's more to life than winning shows."

"All buying and breeding decisions must be based on making money; don't spend too much money for a show-ring calf without the potential to milk."

Over lunch, 4-H'ers evaluated the ten head in the sale lineup, weighing their physical characteristics, the pedigree information assigned to each, and then putting an appraised dollar selling value on each.

Five participants were assigned to each bidding "syndicate," with a $9,000 limit per syndicate. Object, of course, was to obtain the best buys for the least money–without overspending the bankroll.

A brief evaluation of each consignment followed the sale, comparing the price paid for the animal by the syndicates to the appraisal price made by the professionals earlier in the day. Syndicate members were given the chance to justify their buying reasons, and those in the sale box offered explanations for their appraisal prices.

In a brief awards presentation, C. E. Hubbard III was recognized for having the best high and low bid estimates, while Bridgette Boyer came closest to estimating the overall sale average.

Supermarket trends reflect changing lifestyles

ITHACA, N.Y. – Modern supermarkets are more than shelves stocked with groceries. They are mushrooming into mini-shopping centers that cater to the needs and lifestyles of today's busy, health-conscious consumers.

There are now fewer, but larger markets than 30 years ago, and they typically stock twice as many products. Up to 25 percent of these products are nonfood items, and there is a new emphasis on ready-to-eat foods as supermarkets try to compete with away-from-home eating establishments, says Edward McLaughlin, assistant professor of food marketing economics at Cornell University.

These days, more women are working outside the home with little time to spare for shopping. More working couples, informal meals, and food on-the-run all have resulted in more food consumed away from home, McLaughlin points out. In fact, consumers now spend one-third of their food money on food eaten away from home.

Supermarkets, he says, are determined to earn some of that money.

"Salad bars, frozen meal entrees, fresh seafood, fresh baked goods, and expanded deli sections are some of the innovations that markets are using to tempt consumers into buying more ready-to-eat foods for home consumption instead of patronizing restaurants and fast-food eateries," says McLaughlin who teaches in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell.

He points out that food today is being distributed very differently than three decades ago. In 1950, there were more than 400,000 food stores, each serving about 400 people. Today, the number of such markets has shrunk to 160,000, but each services about 1,400 people.

Convenience stores, on the other hand, were very rare in 1950. Today, almost one-quarter of the grocery sales. Ironically, the proliferation of the giant "superstores" left a gap for quick shopping stops which convenience stores are filling.

"Mom and Pop" stores have fallen victim to these burgeoning trends, McLaughlin points out. Busy, time-conscious consumers tend to either want to do a "one-stop shop" where an enormous variety is offered, or just dash into the corner convenience store for a few things.

The exception, however, is in large urban areas, such as Manhattan, where large, sprawling supermarkets with enormous parking lots aren't practical. There, small ethnic markets and fruit stands are still the norm.

Nevertheless, most markets have been adapting to the new lifestyles of the American public.

"The changing consumer is, and will continue to be, one of the forces most responsible for forging the future shape of the food distribution industry," McLaughlin says.

More men, for example, are shopping more today than ever before – about 40 percent of shoppers in some markets are men. On average, men tend to be less concerned about money, buy more on impluse than women, and do not use coupons or lists as much.

Women, on the other hand, are using convenience stores more often because more of them are working and they are increasingly more concerned with time and convenience than their budgets.

As a whole, consumers are more educated, are living in more and smaller households, and are more nutrition-conscious than ever.

In response, markets are offering more products – about 25,000 products in the larger stores – to respond to the many varying requests of consumers.

Where will these trends lead in the future?

Store size will almost certainly continue to expand, McLaughlin predicts. An even greater variety of healthful foods will be offered, including more produce, fresh fish, fresh pasta, and upscale low-calorie entrees. Greater affluence will stimulate markets to offer even more convenient, ready-to-eat foods.

"Finally, the long term rise in Americans traveling abroad to exotic locations will cultivate new preferences for different foods. This will result in demands for more specialty and ethnic foods in hometown stores," McLaughlin says.

Graduations, weddings, garden parties and everyday occasions in Spring are perfect times to use bunches of beautifully scented lilacs. If you have lilacs growing in your garden, you'll not only have a good supply, but also a handsome landscape shrub, says Paul Reber, County Agent, Montgomery County Cooperative Extension Service.

Lilacs are frequently used as border plants with smaller plants in front, as corner plants in public and patio areas, as windscreens and as flowering visual screens. While most gardeners plant them for their spring flowers, the summer foliage on lilacs is handsome and can add interest to your garden.

"I doubt there is a property in Pennysylvania that couldn't support at least one lilac," say Reber. Most are hardy to zone three which means they can stand winter temperatures as low as minus 40°F. In fact, Southern gardeners have more difficulty growing them because lilacs need cold winters to form flowers.

The size of most lilacs is a strong point in their favor. While some varieties are as small as three feet high and others grow to be small trees about 30 feet high, most available varieties remain under ten feet at maturity or can easily be kept to that height with some seasonal pruning.

All lilacs belong to the genus Syringa. Their common plants are unlobed leaves, fragrant flowers, which form in tall clusters, and an upright habit of growth. All are hybrids or varieties from Europe or the Orient. Here are some varieties that grow well in Pennsylvania.

• Common lilac (Syringa vulgaris) is the best known and probably the most widely planted lilac. Originally introduced from Europe by early settlers, this variety became established easily because of its hardiness. It is not uncommon to find it it an open field near the foundation of a house that has long since disappeared.

Old plants can grow as high as 15 feet with a spread of about 12 feet. This is usually too large for most present day gardens unless the lilacs are grown as small trees near a single story house.

Spring flowers can be either white or pinkish-purple, although some hybrids have deeper colors such as blue, magenta or violet. In summer, lilacs have dull bluish-green four to five inch leaves which are heart-shaped. Fall color is a poor yellow – blooms in mid-May.

• Persian lilac (Syringa persica) is a smaller species that gets about eight feet high with an equal spread. The flowers are pale lilac and are very fragrant, covering the outer surface of the plant in three-inch tall clusters. The leaves are two inches long and one-half inch wide and are light bluish-green like the common lilac – blooms in mid May.

• Chinese lilac (Syringa x chinensis) is somewhat of an oddity in the plant world. It is thought to be the first hybrid lilac, which originated as a chance seedling in Rouen, France in 1777, so it is not a Chinese plant at all. It has a broad spreading form about 10 feet tall and just as wide when it matures. The flowers are purple-lilac, fragrant, borne in large, loose six-inch tall clusters. Every few years it needs some light pruning to keep younger wood developing – blooms in mid May.

• Littleleaf lilac (Syringa microphylla) is an interesting, dense shrub which usually grows twice as wide as it is tall, frequently reaching the dimensions of six feet by nine feet. Flowers are a rosy-lilac color in two inch clusters all over the plant. It often has a second smaller flowering in September. This is one of the best varieties of shrub lilac. It works well in borders and in groupings with other plants. It can also be used as a free-standing hedge. Other lilacs tend to open up around the base as they mature but littleleaf stays full to the ground–blooms in mid May.

• Meyer lilac (Syringa meyeri) is probably one of the smaller lilacs available and is usually listed in garden books as growing from four to eight feet high with a spread of about 10 feet. This is a good plant but is sometimes confused and offered as S. palabiniana or S. velutina. These are similar but meyer lilac has distinctive elliptic to ovate leaves, about one and a half inches long and nearly that wide. The leaf margin is slightly wavy and often has a reddish-purple color when young.

They meyer lilac flowers are described as violet-purple, but my plants are a bit more pink. Clusters are quite dense, four inches tall and about two inches wide. The fragrance is not as soft as those on the common lilac but it is pleasant – blooms in mid May.

• Japanese tree lilac (Syringa reticulata) is at the other end of the height scale. It has a tree form and grows to 25 or 30 feet high with a 15 to 20 foot spread. It has several advantages over other lilacs. Its pure white flowers bloom about a month later than common lilac. The bark of mature trees is like that of a cherry tree with a glossy brown color and horizontal lenticles or bumps that form an attractive pattern. Flower clusters, which are 10 to 13 inches high and 6 to 10 inches wide and often persist for up to two weeks, have little fragrance. Some say they smell like privit – blooms in mid June.

Leaves are about five inches long and two to three inches wide and are deep green in the summer. Like other lilacs, the Japanese tree lilac has no interesting fall color.

Economists to study Delaware food buying habits

NEWARK, Del. – Two economists at the University of Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station have announced plans to survey Delawareans about their food buying attitudes as part of a study of the state's retail food industry.

Questionnaires should be mailed this summer to a random sample of resident in Sussex, Kent and New Castle counties. If funds are available, the researchers may also conduct in-store personal interviews with shoppers. The series of studies will probably take three years to complete.

Dr. R. Dean Shippy and Dr. Ulrich C. Toensmeyer say the overall goal of their project is to determine how effectively current and emerging food retailing practices are meeting the needs of Delaware consumers. Better understanding of shopper preferences would also help area farmers tailor production to local demand.

Specifically, the economists want to find out (1) how responsive Delaware food stores are to shopper preferences for product type and size; (2) how satisfied consumers are with current selections of convenience foods available in local stores; and (3)consumer attitudes toward pricing accuracy of electronic scanners and universal product codes as well as automatic checkout procedures in general.

Among other things, Shippy and Toensmeyer are looking for information on shopper packaging preferences for various meat and poultry cuts and major fruits and vegetables; attitudes toward bulk versus prepackaged food products; acceptance of generic versus branded grocery products; and attitudes toward locally produced agricultural products.

Area farmers and food retailers need such information in order to develop effective marketing strategies, the agricultural economists say. For example, knowledge of preferred package sizes for major fresh fruits and vegetables could give Delaware produce growers a basis for evaluating the economics of various package sizes for roadside stands, small stores and supermarkets.

Groceries are big business these days. In 1984 national retail food store sales approached $279.3 billion, with sales in the Northeast accounting for well over 20 percent of that figure. A 1982 survey of Delaware food stores and restaurants showed sales of roughly $555 million in the state.

In 1983 national per capita spending at retail food stores averaged $1,109. During that same year, the average Delawarean spent $1,093 on food at the grocery store.

Because of their size, power and strategic position, food retailers are considered the gatekeepers of the food industry. They make many major marketing decisions for the entire industry. In essence, they serve as consumer purchasing agents, and as such, control one of the most important food marketing sources – the shelf space which is vital to the success of farmer, food manufacturer and food wholesaler marketing efforts

In the long run, however, it's the consumer who calls the shots, say Shippy and Toensmeyer. "How consumers buy food has shaped the modern food retailing picture," they say. "Consumer willingness to shop around, compare values and make store, product and brand substitutions determines the competitive intensity of food markets."

Don't let space stop you from gardening

CREAMERY – Many potential gardeners miss all the joy of growing plants because they don't have access to garden soil or space. Luckily, they can grow fresh, high-quality vegetables in the smallest spaces.

A few containers and some specially-bred container varieties will produce a very attractive kitchen garden all summer, says County Agent Paul Reber.

How small a container is large enough for growing tomatoes, lettuce, peppers or spinach? "Container size has little relation to growth, except for some of the root crops like carrots and beets that penetrate and spread out," Reber says.

"The biggest factor in small-space gardening is the moisture of small containers. Small containers will dry out much faster, and each plant must have a constant supply of moisture and nutrients to produce well."

The real secret to successful container gardening is frequent watering and good drainage of excess water, Reber says. Prior to planting, make certain there are holes in the bottom or on the sides near the bottom of the container.

Contrary to popular belief, a layer of gravel or other porous material in the bottom of the container does not improve drainage. In fact, this layer will actually shorten the soil column in the container and retard drainage. Simply cover the drain holes with a small piece of screen to hold the soil mixture.

Container choice is limitless. Use your imagination, Reber says. Garden centers feature a wide selection of wooden and plastic boxes, baskets and tubs. Some gardners use old tires to create a raised bed for cucumbers or melons. (Old tires aren't the best looking container, but foliage will hide them in a short time.) Plastic trash cans are ideal for tomatoes, and hanging baskets work well for leaf lettuce.

Another advantage of growing vegetables in containers is that you can move them for better sun exposure or more space. Moving the containers is easier if one of the many available lightweight soil mixes is used. Some brands come with added starter nutrients for your plants. A slow-release fertilizer can be incorporated into the mix to extend its plant-feeding qualities. These mixes can be used directly from the bag with no other additives needed. Most garden centers and plant supply outlets handle one or more brands.

Unless you are blessed with very good quality garden soil, avoid using straight soil in a container garden. It is too heavy, and may contain weed, seed or disease organisms to hamper the crop. The drainage of soil in a container is often much poorer than what is found under natural conditions in the field. A wet root system in a container will spell disaster.

If you combine the correct plant type with the growing medium and container, you can't miss. Many seed companies have bred and developed compact varieties of plants suited for container growing. Look on the seed packet or ask the grower.

To lose weight, eat less, exercise more

NEWARK, Del. – The bathing suit season will soon be here and many folks are trying to trim down. In an effort to lose weight, people try all sorts of fad diets, from lollipops to grapefruit. Besides being ineffective, these diets can be downright dangerous.

Peggy Policastro, a student dietitian with the University of Delaware's Coordinated Undergraduate Program in Dietetics, says that to lose weight you must eat less and exercise more. We lose weight when our bodies burn more calories than we consume. For weight reduction to occur, you can either eat less food or exercise regularly--preferably both.

Following popular reducing plans instead of this simple approach can soon lead to serious health problems or compound existing ones, Policastro says.

A good example is the low carbohydrate diet which is the basis of the Scarsdale, Drinking Man's, Calories-Don't-Count, Air Force and similar diets. These plans cut carbohydrate consumption to 60 grams a day or less and allow dieters to eat all the protein or fat foods they want.

According to Policastro, there are two things wrong with this diet. First, the high fat content may contribute to atherosclerosis (hardening of the arteries). And second, its low carbohydrate content could lead to ketosis. This is a condition in which the body produces ketones for energy instead of using available glucose from carbohydrate sources. The outcome of ketosis is nausea and suppressed appetite.

A diet low in carbohydrates also causes the body to lose excess amounts of salt. Since water follows salt, much of the weight loss with this type of diet is water that can easily be regained.

Other popular diets (such as the grapefruit diet) promote one particular food to aid in the "burning up" of another food. However, says Policastro, no food has been shown to accomplish this great feat. These diets are based on a misunderstanding of the way food affects the digestive process. Only a few kilocalories are used to fuel digestion--not enough to burn the calories consumed.

Then there are the folks who think they must stop eating entirely to lose weight. These people survive on non-caloric liquids. Besides the physical hazards of fasting, weight loss of this sort is only as permanent as the fasting. Once the person begins to eat again, the lost weight will quickly return.

Nutritional soundness is essential in any diet. When evaluating one, ask yourself these questions. Is weight loss averaged at one to two pounds a week? Does the diet use behavior modification you can live with? Does it fit your current lifestyle? And does it take into account your sex, body weight and the amount of activity you get? Nutritionally sound diets are probably those with mostly yesses to these questions, Policastro says.

So what does she recommend, if you want to get in trim for the bathing suit season? Eat three well-balanced meals, but give up that slice of cake and walk an extra mile and you'll be off to a safe, healthy and easy weight loss program!

Dauphin County's largest living tree is the John Goodway Sycamore located in Lower Paxton Township.

Dauphin Co. names 'official tree' in bicentennial year

HARRISBURG – Dauphin County Commissioners Jack Minnich, Norm Hetrick and Larry Hochendoner at their April 18 meeting signed a proclamation adopting the American Sycamore as Dauphin County's official tree. Their proclamation stated, "It is proper that during Dauphin County's Bicentennial Celebration an official recognition of the county's forested natural resources should be made."

This species was selected for its longevity, aesthetic and historical values. Duayne Forsberg, resource specialist with the Dauphin County Conservation District, submitted the American Sycamore as the major candidate for Dauphin County's official tree to the Board of County Commissioners. Forsberg had solicited the expertise of various foresters in the process of selecting a county tree.

The American Sycamore (Platanus occidentalis) is an easily recognized tree because of its multicolored mottled bark. As the tree matures the bark separates into large thin scales that resemble pieces of a jigsaw puzzle. It is also noted for the hanging fruiting ball that falls apart by every fall.

Commonly found along Dauphin County's streams in small groves the American Sycamore is frequently used by wood ducks that nest in the hollow cavities caused by damaged or broken limbs. Many canoeists and fishermen have stopped their sport to rest under the shade of one of the largest trees in the eastern deciduous forests.

In a recent news article prepared by Forsberg a number of historical aspects of the American Sycamore in Dauphin County were highlighted.

Long before the Pennsylvania Legislature established Dauphin County on March 4, 1785, seven trees were struggling for survival. Today, those seven trees stand as living giants of Dauphin County's heritage and as a visual tribute to "Celebrate 200!," Dauphin County's Bicentennial. Officially, they are among the oldest of their species in Pennsylvania.

A lone American Sycamore stands just out of sight along Linglestown Road in Lower Paxton Township. The John Goodway Sycamore is the largest living tree in Dauphin County. With a 22'5" circumference, it stands 113 feet high with a crown spread of 131 feet. The Goodway Sycamore is one of seven trees in Dauphin County that are honored as a Penn Tree.

Penn Trees are individual native species that have been living since William Penn first stood on Pennsylvania soil in 1682. Less than 400 trees across the Commonwealth are classified as Penn Trees by the Penn Tree Committee.

Egg production up 24%

HARRISBURG – Pennsylvania's March egg production totaled 398 million, 24 percent above March 1984 production, according to the Pennsylvania Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. The average number of layers on hand during March was 17.7 million compared with 14.8 million on hand a year ago. Egg production per 100 layers was 2,252 compared with 2,174 for March 1984.

United States laying flocks produced 5.93 billion eggs during March, up two percent from the 5.79 billion produced a year ago. The total number of layers during March averaged 278 million, virtually unchanged from a year ago. March egg production per 100 layers was 2,138 compared with 2,084 eggs for March 1984.

New booklet outlines Best Management Practices

NEWARK, De. – Chesapeake Bay is one of the most productive estuaries in the world. It produces more than half the annual U.S. soft-shell clam and blue crab harvest and over one-fourth the oyster catch. In addition, the bay is a major source of finfish such as striped bass and menhaden. However, increased nutrient and toxicant levels in the water constitute a major threat to this valuable ecosystem.

More than 150 rivers, streams and creeks feed fresh water into the Chesapeake, draining a 64,000 square mile basin that occupies parts of New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia and the District of Columbia. Activities throughout this watershed affect water quality in these creeks and rivers. Though urban and industrial development are major polluters, runoff of nonpoint source nutrients from cropland is also a contributor.

One management strategy recommended by the Environmental Protection Agency to reduce this flow of pollutants is the application of so-called best management practices (BMPs) on farmland which drains into the bay. In response, the Cooperative Extension services in the six states of the Chesapeake Basin have developed a list of BMPs which are economically viable for production agriculture.

These practices are outlined in a new extension bulletin, "Best Management Practices for Nutrient Uses in the Chesapeake Basin." The eight-page publication contains a section on plant nutrients from various sources (commercial fertilizer, animal manure and sewage sludge), describing their roles in crop production and behavior in the soil in terms of potential runoff, erosion or leaching. Another section discusses soil erosion caused by natural and cultural activities. The bulletin also contains specific guidelines for nutrient management on agricultural land.

These guidelines cover both field nutrient management practices (including rates, timing and methods of nutrient application, tillage systems, cover crops, rotations, animal stocking rates, grassed waterways) and farm nutrient management (for feedlots, pastures and feed and fertilizer storage facilities).

Copies of "Best Management Practices for Nutrient Uses in the Chesapeake Basin" are available in most participating states from the extension agricultural engineer.

Farm Tour set in York County

HELLAM – The York County Farmer's Association will be sponsoring a "free" farm tour on Saturday, June 15, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. according to chairperson Jack Dehoff.

"The purpose of the tour is to promote better understanding between the farmer and his urban neighbors," said Dehoff, a dairy farmer who lives near Red Lion.

The farm tour is "free" and the general public is invited to take part in the scheduled events. (No reservations are needed.)

Hayrides will transport the public from farm to farm. Other activities will include petting zoo, music, farm displays, crafts and farm fresh food.

The three farms the public will be touring are: William and Louise Flinchbaugh, fruit and livestock farm; Paul and Pearl Mills, Willow Tree Horse Farm; and Harry and Dorinda Arnold, dairy farm.

COW MATS

Use our unique method of installing a one piece mat under a row of cows. Prevents movement of mat and bedding from creeping underneath. All "row" and single mats are cut from heavy one inch rubber belting.

UNIPEL® 13-34-10

fertilizer can get your corn crop off to a super start:

It has a high concentration of water-soluble Phosphorus that gets to young seedlings quickly. Helps plants establish a good root system – the starting point for top yields. Its quick-acting and long-lasting Nitrogen team up to feed the young plants for full yield potential, continually from sprouting to harvest.

This is the Starter Special that corn growers know from good experience. It's highly effective as a banded starter. And it's SAFE . . . no chance of ammonia damage to tender, young seedlings when used as a "pop up" and applied directly with the seed at 50 lbs./acre.

How can we fit UNIPEL 13-34-10 into your corn fertility program?

LIQUID FERTILIZER

Announcing 2 New Products!

Gro-Mor LIQUID-SUL (Thio-Sulfate)

Liquid-Cal can be used with liquid nitrogen which will help maintain your Ph in the top layer of soil when applying liquid nitrogen. Liquid calcium has glocoheptenate which is made from corn by-products. Glocoheptenate helps in breaking down the coarse calcium in your soil.

Liquid-Sul is very important in helping to make protein in your crops. Sulphur in the East is becoming very low in the soil. Many farmers who now are using Liquid-Sul have found higher proteins in many of their crops. Every farmer should be checking his sulphur levels in his soil especially if he is feeding his crops to his cattle.

Farm woes hurt rural areas

WASHINGTON – Most of the nation's rural communities would not be seriously affected by changes in farm commodity policy, according to Agriculture Department analysts. However, areas that are most vulnerable to farm policy shifts also tend to have relatively limited resources to fall back on.

"Of the nation's approximately 2,500 nonmetropolitan counties, some 700 are considered farming-dependent," says economist Mindy Petrulis of USDA's Economic Research Service. "Of those, about 500 receive large per capita outlays from federal farm commodity programs."

These agriculture-dependent counties are the ones that haven't participated fully in the reshaping of the rural economy to a more diversified base. They are concentrated on the western edge of the Corn Belt and in the Great Plains. Smaller concentrations can also be found in the Mississippi Delta, southeastern Coastal Plains, and in the Mountain states such as eastern Washington and Idaho.

These counties averaged only 11,932 residents in 1980, compared with an average population of 25,613 for all nonmetro counties. Forty-six percent have no incorporated town of 2,500 or more people, and nearly 70 percent are not adjacent to a metro area.

The same reasons that make counties dependent on agriculture also make it difficult for them to become less so–their small population and isolation from most major urban markets, as well as the pattern of population decline that has left them with disproportionate numbers of the very young and very old.

"During the 1930's, when most farm programs were initiated, agricultural support programs became the dominant factors affecting the well-being of rural America," says Petrulis. But, since World War II, years of farm consolidation and the growth of nonfarm rural jobs, along with nearly uninterrupted outmigration of farm and nonfarm people from farming-dependent rural areas, have changed the situation.

"Today," says Petrulis, "most rural people do not rely on agriculture and USDA programs as a principal source of employment or income."

That pattern even extends to farmers. When considered as a group, farmers now receive most of their income from nonfarm sources. Moreover, major farm program commodities account for only about 36 percent of total cash receipts in agriculture.

"Thus, changes in farm commodity policy are less important for most rural communities today than the growth and prosperity of the overall national economy, the effects of monetary and fiscal policy, and international trade," he says.

Geographic factors play a role, too, in deciding how impacts of farm policy shifts should be measured.

"We can be sure that selective changes in commodity programs will have different effects in various regions of the country," says Petrulis. "For example, a 10-percent set-aside provision in the 1985 feed grains program will affect not only corn production but also local employment opportunities in agriculture-related industries. Such effects may be especially significant for corn and soybean production areas in such places as Minnesota, where the farm sector and the agricultural input and processing industries account for a substantial percentage of total local employment."

In contrast, he says, impacts will be mild, at most, in areas dominated by nonagricultural activities.

"Farm program changes will affect individual farmers, but may have only limited impacts upon local economies. An example is the irrigated cotton growing areas of Arizona, where agricultural input and processing industries make up only about 1 percent of the total employment."

Effects on land use itself would likely be felt as well.

"With lower farm price supports, more marginal land would be removed from production, and some agricultural production would shift to the lowest cost production regions where land might be used more intensively," says Petrulis. "This may have widespread impacts on some rural areas. There may be reduced interest in soil loss and less conservation by farmers,

Simmental Assoc. announces one-millionth registration

BOZEMAN, Mont. — April 20 marked a milestone for the American Simmental Association, as the 17-year-old organization recorded its one-millionth registration.

Founded in October, 1968, the ASA's first registration certificate was issued on April 13, 1970 to the imported sire, Parisien. Parisien holds the distinction of being the first animal recorded in both the American and Canadian Herdbook. He had been imported from France in 1967 by the late Travers Smith, a Canadian who saw Simmental as a provider of needed genetics for the North American beef industry.

The breed has reached a place of prominence on the American beef cattle scene, currently ranking fourth in terms of annual registrations among 58 recognized beef breeds in the United States.

Since 1974, ASA has registered more than 60,000 animals each year and has exceeded 80,000 on five occasions.

Several reasons have been advanced as to why the Simmental gained such wide-spread acceptability. According to Dr. Bernard Jones, Dean of the College of Agriculture at the University of Nevada-Reno, "Simmental have definitely been the leader in creating change in the beef industry," he said.

The American Simmental Association, which is headquartered at Bozeman, Montana is comprised of more than 10,000 active members, representing all 50 states, the District of Columbia.

WESTPORT, CT — Tough weeds like quackgrass, nutsedge and velvetleaf have long frustrated farmers in their efforts to grow clean fields of corn and other crops.

However, new herbicide weapons are making it a fair fight against these weeds, according to Roger Farrington, product manager for Stauffer Chemical Company.

"Combined with good weed-fighting strategy, the newer herbicides give farmers better control than ever before," he says. "This means more flexibility in cropping decisions — for instance, being able to keep a field in corn or rotate out of it at will, instead of having crop decisions determined by weed problems."

Surveys show that quackgrass, nutsedge and velvetleaf are the most consistently troublesome and difficult-to-control weeds in crops in the Northeast, Farrington says.

Velvetleaf and quackgrass tend to increase when farmers begin to use less atrazine, he points out. High rates of atrazine control both weeds effectively, but lock a field into continuous corn for two or more years because of the herbicide's long persistence.

Quackgrass and nutsedge are tough to control because they are perennials, reproducing from underground rhizomes or tubers. Velvetleaf, an annual, is a prolific seed producer and can germinate from deep in the soil throughout the growing season. Long-lasting control is important with all three weeds, Farrington says.

Preplant incorporated (PPI) herbicides generally are the most effective treatments for nutsedge, velvetleaf and quackgrass, he adds. The tillage involved in mixing herbicides into the soil helps chop up underground rhizomes and tubers, and places herbicides down closer to deep-generating velvetleaf seeds.

For bad infestations, Farrington says Eradicane Extra® is the strongest PPI herbicide available. It's a new, longer-lasting formulation of Eradicane, and it should be mixed with Bladex or atrazine for broad-spectrum control.

"Bladex" or atrazine will team up with the Eradicane Extra on these tough weeds," Farrington says.

Atrazine is the preferred tank-mix partner for velvetleaf or quackgrass, Farrington says. In the tank mix, rates of atrazine can be kept low enough that carryover to rotated crops won't be a problem.

Where soybeans are grown, new postemergence herbicides for both broadleaf weeds and grasses give farmers back-up treatments for all three weeds, Farrington says. But if control is good enough in corn, these costly follow-ups may not be needed.

"It's a matter of balancing a feasible crop rotation with available weed control treatments," he says. "And with better herbicides, farmers have more options than were previously available."

For more information on controlling tough weeds, contact R-K Agri Service in Lancaster; PL Rohrer & Bros, Inc. in Smoketown or Melvin R. Weaver in Lancaster.

although erosion will be somewhat offset by the reduced cultivation of more marginal land. Depending on how these effects balance out, the result could be additional deposits of silt in waterways and environmental degradation for rural residents."

Still, the harshest impact of changed policies may fall upon those least able to make the transition to a more diversified economy.

"Rural communities with a high dependence on farming have many specialized human and business assets that have limited use elsewhere in the economy," says Petrulis. "It is likely that the adjustments would be most severe among residents of these sparsely populated farming areas, which number several hundred and are highly concentrated in a few states. These states include Iowa, Nebraska, Illinois, North Dakota, and South Dakota."

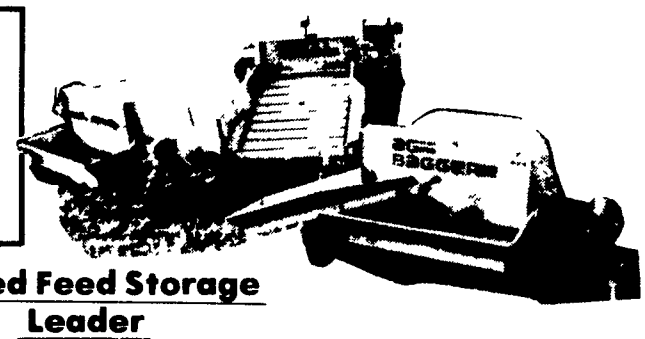
AG-BAG System Compare & SAVE



Sealed Feed Storage Leader

Better Forage At Lower Cost

Ag-Bag System gives not only lower investment and interest cost, but gives the quality forage you would expect with an oxygen limiting silo. By using the Ag-Bag on a custom work basis no major capitol cost was required and the interest which was foreseen with other systems was eliminated We would recommend the Ag-Bag System for anyone with storage shortage at a very low cost per ton of feed

THE KRAUSE LANDSMAN

saves FUEL

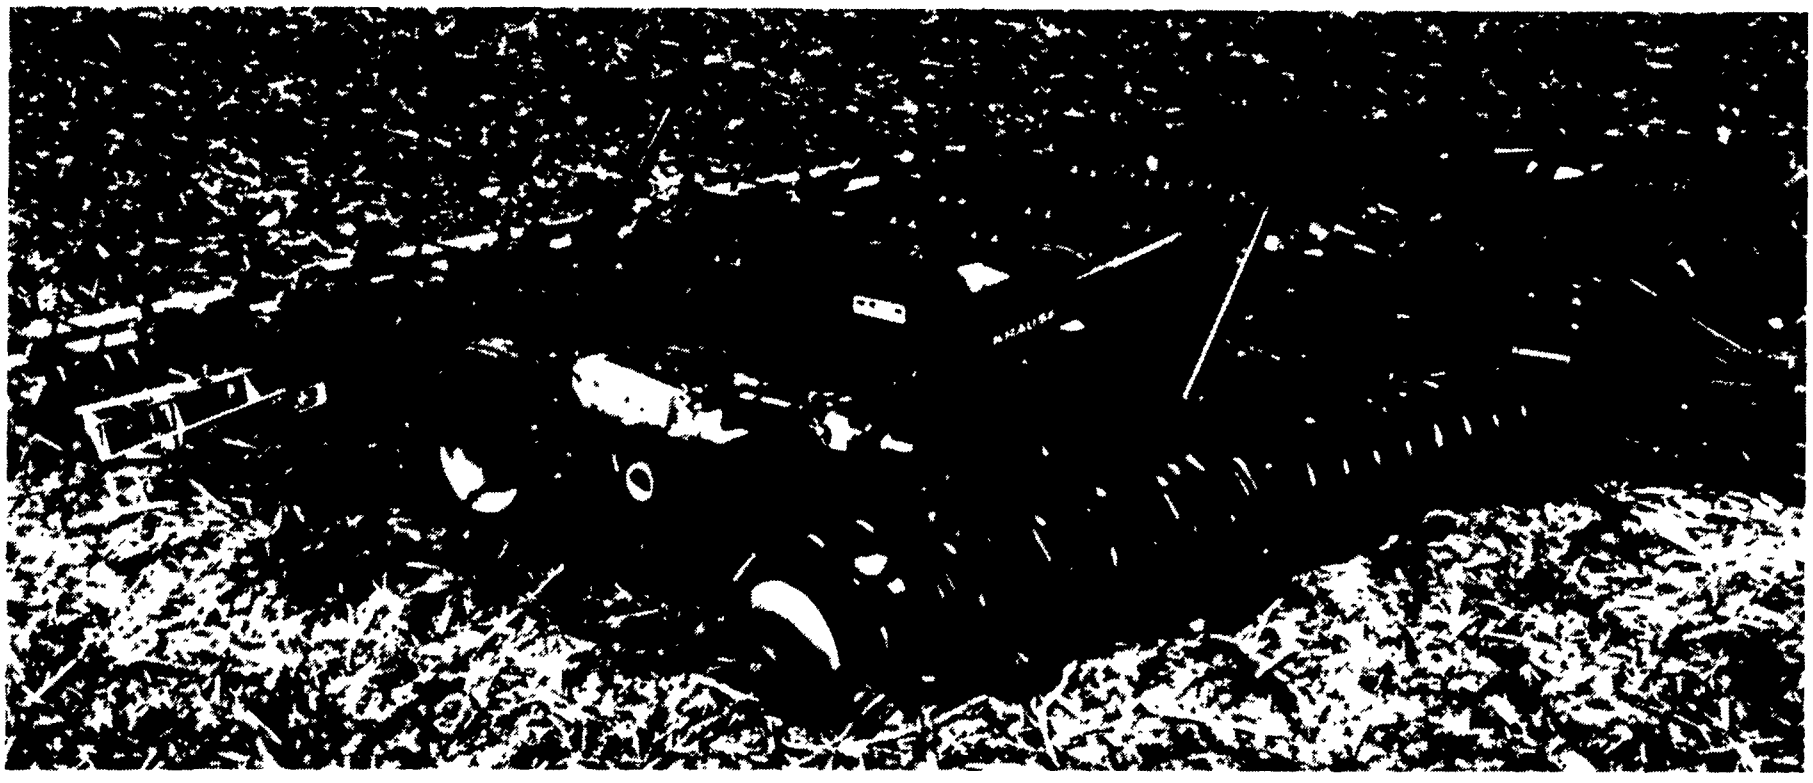
LANDSMAN is the Conservation Tillage Tool from Krause



The same Krause that pioneered the ROCKFLEX bearing hanger and the FLEX-WING Disc Harrow has built the LANDSMAN Conservation Tillage Tool to do in one pass what you now do in four. With a LANDSMAN you can disc, incorporate chemicals, cultivate and finish all in one trip. This can reduce your tillage costs by 70%. Because the LANDSMAN is designed to operate effectively at 6 to 7½ miles per hour, you'll cover more acres in less time and burn considerably less fuel.

YOU CAN EXPECT SUPERIOR PERFORMANCE FROM THE LANDSMAN, BECAUSE IT'S FROM KRAUSE

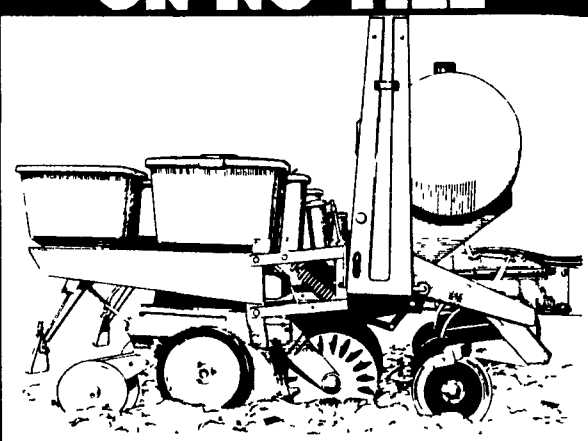
FOR LOW-TILL OR NO-TILL



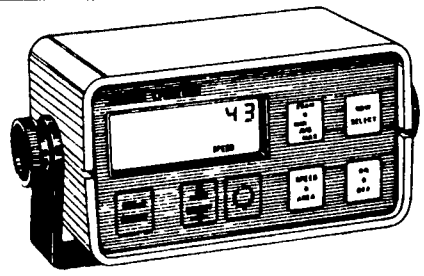
Save fuel, time, moisture and soil with a Max-Emerge® conservation planter

Here's a rugged planter you can rely on in most soil conditions, including stubble and many sod fields

Heavy-duty springs help transfer weight from the 7-inch frame to each planting unit to keep unit-mounted coulters in the ground. Frame-mounted coulters and cast-iron firming wheels are available too, for extra-tough conditions

Whether you no-till, low-till or conventionally till your ground, these 4-row (30 to 40-inch rows) and 6- and 8-row narrow models can help you save fuel, time, moisture and soil. See us soon for details.

Computer-Trak™ Monitor



Calculator-type display gives you up-to-the-second planting data

Numbers in the monitor window display minimum, average and maximum seed population, quick as a wink.

You can check speed and acres planted, too. And wiring harnesses custom-fit your Max-Emerge® planter.

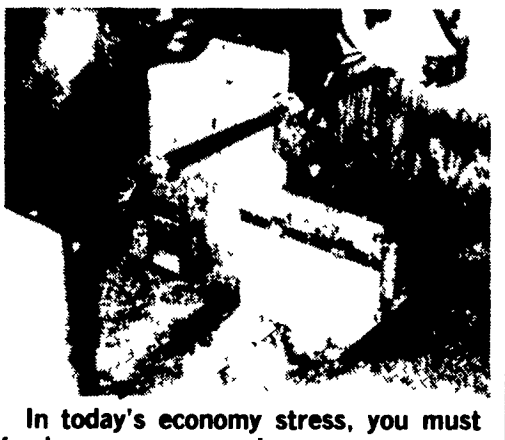
(ATTENTION DAIRYMAN)


In today's economy stress, you must feed your cows properly.
Put in trough dividers, with fold up flaps to make easy sweeping. It prevents late lactating cows of over-eating & gives the high producers more time to eat their feed which results in more dry matter intake and more milk.
Being able to know exactley what each cow eats will be a benefit to you and the cow.
We also build self locking head gates and cattle guards, gutter grates.

INTRODUCING NEW MASTER MIX
SILO-BOOSTER

SUMMARY OF RESULTS

Alfalfa Ensiled With And Without SILO-BOOSTER Conducted At The University Of Minnesota West Central Experiment Station Morris, Minnesota 1984 Crop

DRY MATTER RECOVERY (1)	CONTROL	SILO-BOOSTER
Amount D.M. Ensiled, lb.	26,228	30,418
Amount D.M. Removed, lb.	24,432	30,278
Recovery, %	93.2	99.5

(1) Individual loads of fresh forage were weighed before ensiling; after storage, silos were emptied completely at one time.

	CONTROL	SILO-BOOSTER
Dry Matter, %	50.66	54.98	**
pH	6.33	5.82	*
Crude Protein, %	23.64	23.45	NS
Ammonia Nitrogen	19.76	14.80	**
ADIN-N. % of total N	5.76	5.58	NS
ADF, % of D.M.	31.74	30.23	**
NFD, % of D.M.	42.44	41.88	NS
Lactic Acid, % of D.M.	1.00	.87	NS
Acetic Acid, % of D.M.	.72	.52	NS
Propionic Acid, % of D.M.	.018	.007	**
Butyric Acid, % of D.M.	.119	.027	***

Dry matter recovery data from these conventional silos demonstrates a 6.3% difference in feedable alfalfa silage. For each 100 tons of silage, there would be an additional 6.3 tons of silage available for feeding. This is equivalent to 3.5 tons of 90% dry matter hay worth approximately $350.00. This is a $3.50 return for each $1.00 investment in SILO BOOSTER from a reduction in fermentation losses alone.

Master Mix® CENTRAL SOYA

Why should you use new Master Mix SILO-BOOSTER instead of another product? SILO-BOOSTER has been proven in 20 years of on-farm use, as well as in continuous university research. With each new discovery in silage science, we have improved the original formula. Today's SILO-BOOSTER gives the most effective silage innoculant yet developed.

APPLICATION: 1 Lb. of SILO-BOOSTER per ton of Forage.

Add Feed Value To This Year's Haylage By Reducing Costly Fermentation Losses

'Block and Bridle' judging contest attracts record field

Staff Correspondent

STATE COLLEGE – The Penn State Block and Bridle Club honored the winners from its annual Spring Livestock Judging Contest during the banquet held in conjunction with the Little International.

The contest is sponsored and organized by the students of Block and Bridle as one of its many events throughout the year. The purpose of the event is to encourage young people of all ages and degrees of expertise to participate in a state-wide contest.

In the 4-H/FFA Division, participants are divided into beginner and advanced categories. The high Beginner Team honors went to a Lebanon County 4-H team composed of Daryl Grumbine, Darren Grumbine, Amy Weaber, and Melanie Bow. This team's score was 19 points above all the other beginner teams.

The high Beginner Judge award went to Daryl Grumbine of Myerstown. Daryl had a score of 391 out of a possible 400 points. He was also high individual in swine and third high in beef.

The high Advanced Team plaque was presented to the York County 4-H team composed of Jamie Kohr, Melissa Trostle, Krista Rankin, and Tim Ferrence. This team had an outstanding day as they topped all three species divisions and won overall by 175 points above their nearest competitors.

The high Advanced Judge honors went to Jamie Kohr. Jamie topped the sheep and swine divisions, was third in beef and also won the high Advanced Reasons award.

In the Collegiate division, Brian Barkley won the high Amateur Judge award. Claiming high Professional Judge honors was Jeff Brown, and Robert Livingston received the high Professional Reasons plaque.

Chairman of the event, Nelson Beam, stated that this year's Judging Contest was the largest ever with over 450 participants. The members of Block and Bridle Club are excited to see that number of young people from across Pennsylvania interested in pursuing this activity.

Nelson Beam presents the high Beginner Judge plaque to Daryl Grumbine of Myerstown. The Lebanon County team of Daryl Grumbine, Amy Weaber, Melanie Bow and Darren Grumbine earned high Beginner Team award.

Feed Processing

You can do a lot of things to feed grains before they reach the hog. As you consider alternatives, remember that your goal is to process feed in the most economical and practical way for conditions on your farm. Here's a quick review of most of the processing methods used today.

Grinding is probably the method most commonly used in the hog industry. When combined with complete mixing, it provides the pig with a ration that eliminates sorting and wasting of ingredients.

Is grinding necessary? It's not as critical for corn as it is for small grains. Everything hinges on whether the hog will do a good job of chewing up what he gets out of the feeder. Bear in mind that the added performance you get from grinding dry grains will almost always outweigh the cost of grinding.

Most producers have good success using a 1/4- to 3/8-inch screen. The idea is to break up grains enough so that they don't pass through the hog untouched, while keeping the texture coarse enough to prevent the feed from getting too dusty. Wheat and grain sorghum can both give problems when ground too fine.

High moisture corn (from an oxygen limiting silo) works well if only coarsely ground or rolled. When it's blended with supplement at the same time watch for separation or sorting.

Pelleting generally improves feed conversion by 5 to 9 percent. Part of the benefit results from the added heat during pellet formation. This helps to increase starch availability. Hogs on pellets also waste less. Pelleting will pay for itself when you can get it done for less than 7 percent of the ration cost. For example, when feed is $160 a ton, you shouldn't pay more than $11.20 for pelleting.

Roasting soybeans and using them in place of soybean meal in a growing-finishing diet will improve feed efficiency by 4 to 6 percent. Is this enough to make roasting worthwhile? Usually not. To be sure, figure the cost of a normal corn-soybean meal diet. Then formulate a diet using corn and whole roasted beans. When you add in the cost of roasting (generally about 50 cents per bushel), the whole bean diet will often cost at least 60 percent more than the corn-soy diet.

Is there any difference in hog performance when using extruded soybeans in the ration instead of whole roasted soybeans? No. You'll recall that extruded soybeans, instead of being heated with a flame are forced through dye. Provided the roasting or extruding processes are both done correctly, there should be no difference in performance.

Also note that roasting will not improve the availability of the fat in soybeans.

Raw soybeans cannot be used in a growing finishing diet without sacrificing performance. They can be safely used in gestation diets. And more recent data shows that feeding them during lactation may be satisfactory as well. The problem with the raw beans will probably be cost, since it's cheaper to buy protein in the form of soybean meal. So there don't appear to be any significant advantages to using raw soybeans for sows.

Roasting feed grains such as corn or milo might help improve starch availability. But the response in hog performance is not consistent. The one consistent thing about grain roasting is that it costs money. Claims that protein content is increased after roasting merely reflect a decrease in moisture content. Claims that roasting will kill mold are probably correct, but roasting won't destroy the endotoxins produced by the molds. And it's the endotoxin that poisons the hog.

High moisture corn provides no better performance than dry corn. Nutritionally the only significant factor in favor of high moisture corn is a higher phosphorus availability. But oxygen-limiting silos do provide another grain handling method. And even with their cost, high moisture corn may be similar in cost to dry corn over the long run. So the decision to buy an oxygen-limiting silo should be based solely on its merits as a grain handling system.

Enzymes, when added to feed, seem to be of no benefit for pigs over 3 weeks of age. And numerous trials have been conducted regarding enzyme supplementation for pigs under 3 weeks, since their ability to synthesize enzymes is not quite up to speed. But the results have not been encouraging.

If you're considering a change from the usual grain handling and processing methods, take a hard look at what you'll be getting. If the company representative claims improvements in hog performance, ask him for experimental data. And by all means be sure the extra performance is enough to pay for the added cost of the new process.

WHITE FARM EQUIPMENT

When wet spots or other tough areas slow you down, a quick shift into four-wheel drive can make all the difference. And all it takes is a Power Front Axle option on your 2-135, 2-155 or 2-180 Field Boss® tractor.

4WD is not created equal. If you think all Power Front Axles are the same, look again. Most tractors use the engine as part of the structural frame. Adding four-wheel drive puts a lot of stress on the engine block. We think too much stress.

It's one reason why every Field Boss has a separate main frame casting. The engine is cradled inside it. Besides adding hundreds of pounds in working weight to the tractor, this separate main frame handles the extra stress of the four wheel drive.

A separate heavy cast main frame teamed with full mechanical drive makes our Power Front Axle one of the most dependable anywhere.

Feel the quality. Experience the value.

Let us show you the difference in disks.

Extra strong gang bolts, better bearings and a large selection all help set White Farm disks apart from the competition.

Solid construction. Sturdy gang bolts prevent bending. And White Farm bearings and bearing housings are made to hold-up under high speeds, heavy residue and rough terrain.

More weight means better disking. There are ways to spot built in working weight without putting the implement on a scale. One example is massive box beams of high carbon steel used in all of our disks. More steel means more durability, plus adds weight to keep disks in the ground.

Models for every need. We've got a disk for your farm. Offset, rigid- and flexible-tandem disks, many with flat folding features. With blade spacings available in 7-, 9- and 11-inches.

A more valuable disk chisel.

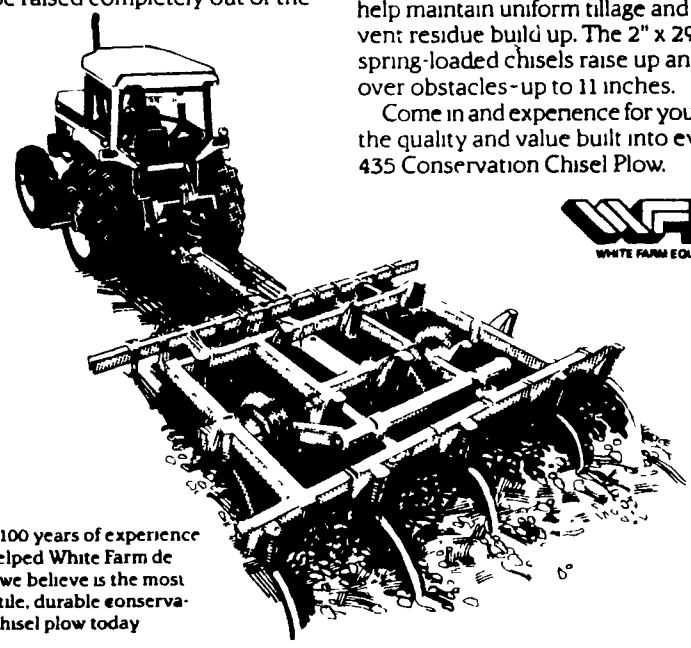
All disk chisels can save topsoil. But White Farm's 435 Conservation Chisel Plow also saves time and money.

Versatile concave disks up-front. Individually mounted 22 inch blades are hydraulically controlled to let you determine the amount of residue that remains on the surface. Disks can be raised completely out of the ground for maximum conservation, or lowered for maximum tillage.

Big 4" x 6" frames. Our steel box beams have 25 percent more weld area at every joint than competitors' 4" x 4" beams.

Chisel shanks every twelve inches. Three ranks of chisels spaced twelve inches apart on a long 90 inch frame help maintain uniform tillage and prevent residue build up. The 2" x 29" spring-loaded chisels raise up and over obstacles - up to 11 inches.

Come in and experience for yourself the quality and value built into every 435 Conservation Chisel Plow.



Over 100 years of experience has helped White Farm de what we believe is the most versatile, durable conservation chisel plow today

Understanding the Wool Incentive Program

Editors note: The following explanation of the Wool Incentive Program is by Vern B. Swanson, Extension Sheep Specialist, Colorado State University. Dr. Swanson's explanation of the program is concise and valuable, especially to newer growers.

Due to the amount of circulated misinformation on the wool incentive program, it is necessary to explain the background and examples of how it works. The program, along with other farm programs, will come up for congressional review in 1985 and is presently receiving the attention of the sheep industry leadership. Agriculture industry leaders are predicting problems in securing the passage of farm bills in 1985 and have emphasized a need that producers be knowledgeable about their own programs.

The wool incentive program was a result of the National Wool Act of 1954. This action by Congress was the culmination of a dedicated effort by the U.S. sheep industry leadership of the 1950's. The objectives of the act were to: (1) encourage an annual production of 300-million pounds of wool, (2) furnish financial assistance to the sheep industry by means of payments to growers to bring their wool income up to an incentive level rather than raising the tariff on imported wools, (3) to limit payments to 70 percent of tariff receipts on imported wools, and (4) to provide a self-help feature whereby the industry could develop advertising and promotion programs to improve the demand for products.

The wool incentive program has been extended for three-year periods since its inception and is up for renewal in 1985. It is important to note that the source of funding for the program comes from proceeds of tariffs on imported wools, not directly from the general treasury.

The payment is not considered a direct subsidy because the higher the merit of your product the more of a payment you receive. For example, in a given year one producer might receive a net payment of 20 cents/grease pound, while another producer might receive 40 cents/grease pound. The mandate for the promotion and advertising of products led to the formation of the American Sheep Producers Council.

Incentive levels (the price people feel wool should be selling for) are established in the legislation approving the program. The level was $1.37 in 1982, $1.53 in 1983 and $1.62 in 1984. In 1955 it was only 62 cents. Average sales price of all grease wool in a given year is computed from producer filings for incentive payments with local ASCS offices. The calculation for the U.S. rate of payment is as follows: (1982 used as an example)

1982 Incentive Level	$1 37 /grease lb
Minus 1982 Average Price	684/grease lb
Difference	$ 686/grease lb

The difference of $.686 is divided by the average price of $.684 to determine the rate of incentive payment. The answer expressed as a percent in this calculation is 100.3%. This does not mean that each producer receives a flat payment of $.686/pound of shorn grease wool sold. The actual price received for the wool is multiplied by 100.3% Compare producer A who sold wool for $.60 and producer B who sold wool for $.80.

	Producer A	Producer B
Sale price/lb grease wool	$ 60	$ 80
Rate of Payment	x100 3%	x100 3%
Gross paymemt pound	$ 602	$ 802
ASPC	- 04	- 04
Net payment/ pound	$ 562	$ 762

Not only did producer B get $.20/pound more but an additional $.20 for the net incentive payment. Producer A had a total income of $.60 + $.56 or $1.16 for each pound of wool, whereas producer B had a total income of $.80 + $.762 or $1.62 for each pound of wool. It would appear that the difference is worth working for.

The payment for live unshorn lamb sold is at a flat rate. The difference of $.686 ($1.37 - $.684) is multiplied by 4 to arrive at a gross payment of $2.74 per hundred weight of live unshorn lamb sold. Lamb feeders receive their share of an incentive by being paid on the basis of the amount of gain they put on the lambs. The Wool Incentive Program is working for you. You as a producer need to decide if you want it continued.

Who Got the Best Buy?

Farmer Bob and Farmer Ray bought confinement equipment the very same day!
Farmer Ray thought he had a fantastic bargain — soon he discovered that a bargain product can be far more costly in the long run as everything soon rusted and corroded! Fencing Nursery Pens, Farrowing Crates, and Gestation Stalls — all now need to be replaced at today s higher costs
Farmer Bob chose Rohn "Hot Dip Galvanized" Agri Products and his equipment is still as good as new. The reason? Zinc is the finish that withstands corrosive elements longer and provides years of carefree, reliable service
There's no doubt about it, Rohn Agri Products are your very "Best Buy"!

New blue tongue vaccine developed by USDA

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Safe, experimental vaccines have been developed to protect livestock against bluetongue, a disease costing farmers millions of dollars annually, U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) scientists said today.

Charles H. Campbell, a microbiologist with USDA's Agricultural Research Service, said that the new vaccines protected sheep from bluetongue in laboratory tests.

Bluetongue diseases causes mouth sores, lameness, abortion, birth defects and death in sheep and deer. Cattle, the main carriers of the bluetongue virus, do not usually become sick. Gnats transmit the virus from cattle to sheep.

Campbell developed the vaccines using mice at the research agency's Animal Disease Center at Plum Island, N.Y. Tests on sheep were then conducted by veterinarian Thomas Lynn Barber at the agency's Arthropod-borne Animal Diseases Laboratory, Denver, Colo.

The bluetongue vaccines could be in the hands of farmers and veterinarians in five to six years if further tests also succeed, Campbell said.

So far, the new vaccines have been successfully tested against two of the five types of bluetongue virus that exist in the United States, he said. (Worldwide, there are 24 types).

The new vaccines are made of particles of killed virus. They are safer to livestock than are live-virus vaccines, Campbell said.

"A live virus vaccine against bluetongue-type 10, already available in the U.S., is approved for use in sheep," he said. "However, live vaccine viruses may revert to a virulent form, or cause birth defects if given to pregnant animals."

The new vaccines are prepared by killing bluetongue virus with gamma rays.

"Gamma rays destroy the interior genes of the virus, without harming its protein coat. In the body of an animal, the virus coat is 'recognized' as foreign, and thus triggers antibodies that form against the virus," Campbell said.

Bluetongue costs the U.S. cattle industry an estimated $30 million annually in sales of cattle, semen and embryos to overseas markets that fear introduction of the disease, according to the scientists.

Dollar losses to the entire U.S. livestock industry cannot be estimated due to problems in bluetongue diagnosis. Infected livestock may show no outward sign of disease at all, they said.

Bluetongue virus exists in most parts of the United States, with greatest incidence in some Southern and Western states, the scientists said.

Junior Shorthorn Show and conference

OMAHA, NE – American Junior Shorthorn Association members from across the United States and Canada will gather at the Wisconsin State Fairgrounds in Milwaukee June 29 to July 3 for the association's annual National Junior Shorthorn Heifer Show and National Shorthorn Youth Conference.

The Shorthorn/Polled Shorthorn breed has long been noted for its powerful females, and at a show of this size and quality, the best of those future brood cows are brought to the show ring.

In the past, heifers that have been shown in Shorthorn junior nationals have gone on to play significant roles within the breed serving as brood cows.

In addition to individual honors during the show, exhibitors will also take part in the outstanding state group of four females competition, and the best pair of females competition.

The American Junior Shorthorn Association will also sponsor the National Shorthorn Youth Conference. At this conference, which also serves as the annual meeting of the American Junior Shorthorn Association, A.J.S.A. members and other interested cattlemen will take part in business meetings, seminars and tours of the Milwaukee area.

Guest speakers during the conference will include: Dr. Bob Rowe, embryo transfer specialist, Middletown, Wi.; Mr. Keith VanderVelde, American Breeders Service, DeForest, Wi.; Mr. Floyd Doering, State Department of Agriculture, Madison, Wi.; and Mr. Tom Ritchey, Granada Shorthorns, Cloverdale, In.

BUSINESS NEWS...

Dyna-Drive, a high-speed, ground-driven rotary cultivator, has two rotating shafts which create a seedbed that offers excellent control of wind and water erosion and good germination qualities.

Hart-Carter unveils Dyna-Drive cultivator

A unique high speed, soil and energy conserving, ground driven rotary cultivator is now available in the U.S. from Hart-Carter Co. of Mendota, Illinois.

Called Dyna-Drive, the tool employs speed differential between two rotating shafts which, when pulled through the field, leave a seedbed that offers excellent wind and water erosion control, good germination qualities while reducing energy costs.

Dyna-Drive was one of the 1984 winners of "Implement and Tractors" first design award competition.

The Dyna-Drive is unlike either conventional rotary or tine-type cultivators. It requires no PTO, no gear box and virtually no maintenance.

The two rotating tine shafts are ground driven, turning in 3-1 ratio– the front slower, the rear 3 times faster.

In effect, the front rotor tines provide a plowing, or lifting action and the rear tines churn the soil. It is estimated the tines will last about six times longer than conventional cultivator points.

The tines on each shaft have spiraling and offset configurations lifting soil upwards, leaving no pathways for wind and water to wash away the soil. The tool leaves clods and trash on top with small soil particles beneath to enclose seeds and provide good germination. Depth control is easily achieved from 1½" to 5½".

Four models are available, ranging in width from 7 to 16 ft.

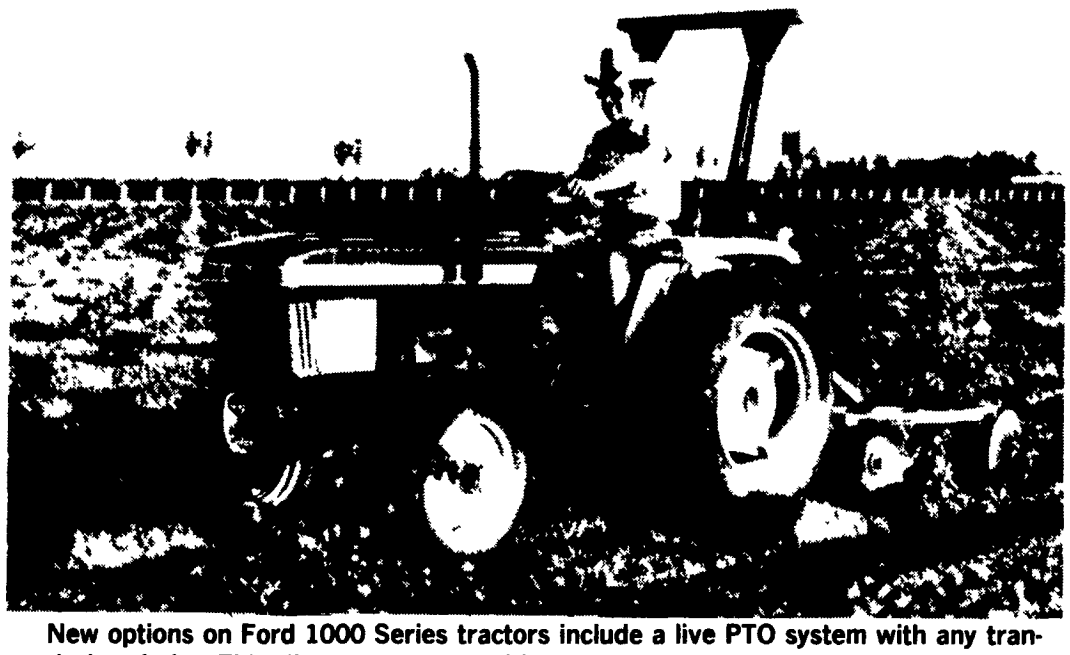
New Ford light tractor options



New options on Ford 1000 Series tractors include a live PTO system with any transmission choice. This allows operator to either stop the tractor and continue the PTO by depressing the pedal part way, or stop both the PTO and tractor by depressing the pedal all the way.

Also available is power steering on 1310 and 1510 models, as well as a draft control option on the 1710. The latter allows hydraulic system to sense changes in draft load and adjust implement depth accordingly.

DuPont exec: Biotech will be 'Key avenue for growth'

MADISON, Wi. – In only a few years, biotechnology has become a "key avenue for business growth" and is well on its way toward becoming a multi-billion dollar industry, says a Du Pont executive.

"Long-range projections of growth rates for biotechnology-based businesses are most attractive," says Dale E. Wolf, group vice president of Du Pont's agricultural chemicals division. "Some experts predict that total sales could reach well over $35 billion by the turn of the century."

Wolf spoke recently at the "Issues in Agriculture" lecture series sponsored by the College of Agricultural and Life Sciences at University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Biotechnology's most immediate and dramatic benefits will occur in health care and agriculture, Wolf says. In health care, biotechnology's commercial potential has already become reality with the development of vaccines, diagnostic kits and human insulin, he says. In agriculture, biotechnology sales to farmers may increase from almost nothing today to $2 billion by 1990.

Wolf says agricultural products and applications might include herbicides so potent that only an ounce will treat an acre of wheat, food crops that are resistant to herbicides, and modified plants that are resistant to drought, heat and cold.

Other aspects of agricultural biotechnology might involve plant-growth regulators to make photosynthesis more efficient and produce bigger yields, and "antifeedants" that would prevent insects from eating treated plants.

Competition in biotechnology is becoming increasingly intense on both the domestic and international fronts, Wolf says. Foreign concerns held 40 percent of the 826 new U.S. biotechnology patents issued in 1984, he says.

"Overseas inventors hold a substantial number of U.S. biotechnology patents," he says. "Although the foreign share has been shrinking steadily, it is still large."

The governments of England, France, Japan and West Germany have made biotechnology a national priority, Wolf says. Of those countries, companies in Japan and West Germany will give U.S. companies the greatest competition, he says.

"The competition is still and may become even more so in the future," Wolf says. "This means that the ability of America to maintain its pre-eminence in this field rests on strengthening the partnership among universities, government and industry."

"To keep America's competitive edge, expansion of basic knowledge and understanding about biotechnology is absolutely key. Academia can make a very special contribution by attracting the best and brightest students to science and, in particular, to agriculture-related fields."

Trojan introduces new wet feeder nipple

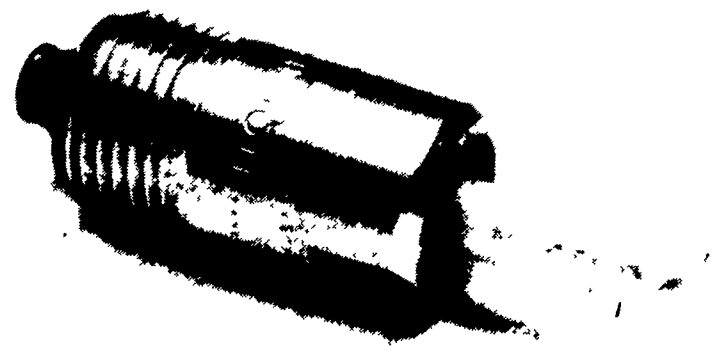
CONRAD, IA — Confinement hog producers now can replace worn nipples in wet feeders with the new #65 wet feeder nipple from Trojan Specialized Livestock Equipment, according to Jerry Peterson, director of engineering.

"Like its predecessors, the #75 and Spiglet nipples, the #65 has a simple, efficient design which allows for easy installation, maintenance and serviceability, if needed," says Peterson.

"The half-inch valve is made of heavy-duty 304 stainless steel and other non-corrosive materials to ensure long life and durability. A slotted filter supplies high quality water by screening out dirt and contaminents.

"The #65 can be used in wet feeding systems that employ either pressure regulators or gravity tanks. The Trojan #65 wet feeder nipple comes as standard equipment on a variety of wet feeding systems. Or it is available direct from the manufacturer as a service part."

More information on the #65 wet feeder nipple and the full line of Trojan watering and livestock equipment can be obtained by contacting Trojan Specialized Livestock Equipment, 120 South Main, Conrad, Iowa 50621 U.S.A.



The new #65 Wet Nipple Feeder from Trojan has an efficient design that allows for easy installation, maintenance and servicing of the nipple.

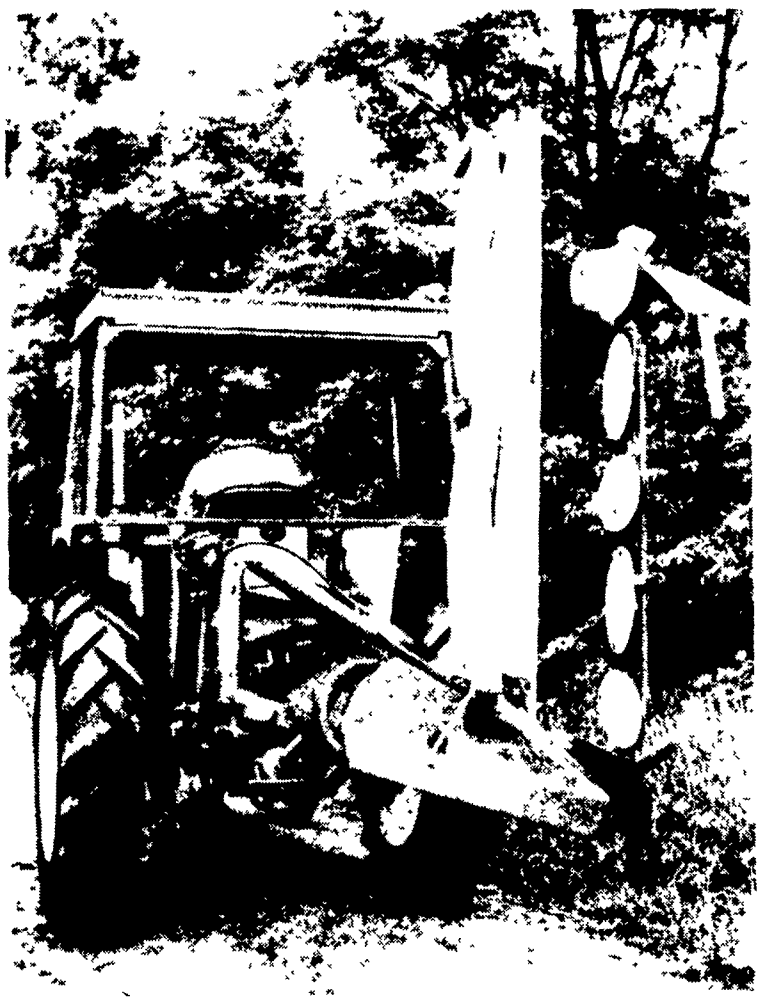
Kuhn redesigns mowers for longer life



The Kuhn GMD Multidisc Mower, shown here in transport position, has high speed oval discs and can cut up to six acres of grass or legumes per hour with low-power requirements.

VERNON, N.Y. — Kuhn has introduced refinements in all three sizes of its GMD Multidisc Mower series, in an attempt to lengthen the operating life of the equipment.

Available in working widths from 5 ft. 3 inches to 7 ft. 10 inches, the largest units can work up to six acres per hour yet have power requirements of only 45 h.p.

The GMD 66, largest of the three sizes, has six oval cutting discs in a design that overcomes plugging in dense or wet conditions... and prevents bent blade damage to adjoining discs.

Two blades per disc mean lower maintenance costs, and the heavy durable discs are mounted on splined pinion shafts to maintain perfect knife timing.

Helical cut gears run in an oil bath to provide dependability, smooth drive, and even loading.

Safety frame support at the end of the cutterbar prevents stress damage, and the Kuhn GMD provides the highest safety frame clearance of any other disc mower.

The GMD Mower used "O" Ring seals throughout to assure more troublefree operation. Each unit also has its own toolbox for convenience.

Kuhn provides major warehousing at locations throughout the United States and Canada, and also makes available airlift service for replacement parts when required.

Further information on the line of GMD Multidisc Mowers is available form Kuhn Farm Machinery, Inc., P.O. Box 224-P, Vernon, New York, 13476.

Round baler has plastic wrap option

M & W Gear Company, Gibson City, IL announces the addition of two new round balers to the M & W line.

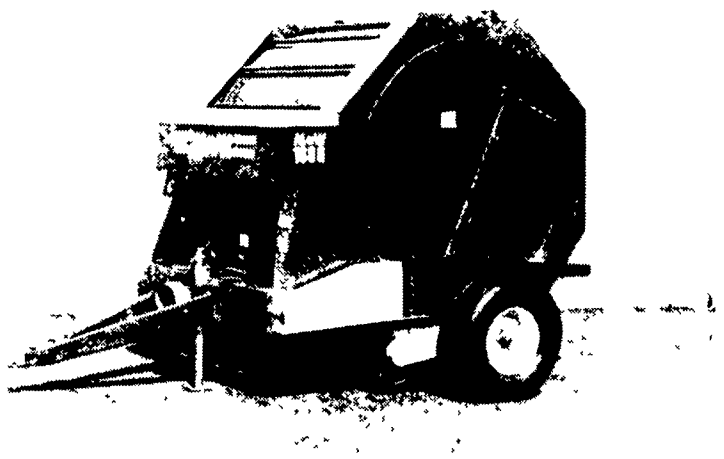
The M & W Round Baler is of the fixed cavity, enclosed bale chamber design. The enclosed chamber design reduces leaf loss and is also cleaner operating than most other round balers. This design has 30 percent fewer parts and eliminates troublesome and expensive belts.

The unit forms a bale with a soft core for faster curing and firm outer layers to retain the round shape. The core density of the bale may be varied by manual adjustment.

When the bale is completed, twin indicator lights signal the operator to stop, open the cavity and release the finished bale. A light mounted on the tractor also signals the completion of a bale.

M & W also offers a patented plastic wrap attachment to wrap each bale in plastic before the bale is ejected from the bale chamber. This provides protection from the elements when the bales are stored outside and retains the food value of the bale. Once the plastic wrap is installed, the operator can convert from twine to plastic or plastic to twine in minutes.

The baler is available in two models to produce 5'-by-4'-wide or 6'-by-5'-wide bales.



M&W's round baler produces 5'-by-4' or 6'-by-5' bales.

The R&D facility will be equipped with state-of-the-art scientific equipment and contain labs and offices to house Griffin's expanding research chemistry and field research teams. In addition there will be an on-site research and testing farm.

Whatley said the unit has three major labs dedicated to new project research.

"A good example of this," he said "is our pheromone research project where we are looking at new and existing technology to help develop new insecticides.

"In addition," Whatley added, "we will be looking at new materials that we develop in-house as well as several of the promising new molecules. We will continue to look at existing chemistry and old molecules, too, so we can improve our current product line. Timed-release chemicals for agriculture is another major area of interest for us."

Griffin has a well established and extensive research and testing program in many countries conducted by outstanding scientists and university researchers.

"This program couple with our additional research and development capability in the U.S. should help us get the test data we need to bring new herbicides, insecticides and fungicides to the market at an accelerated rate and at lower-than-industry costs," Whatley said.

In keeping with its long-term objective of marketing more of its own patented compounds, Griffin is conducting an aggressive world search for new chemsitry and new products.

"The new facility," said Whatley, "will enable us to better assimilate all of the test data we gather from our research programs around the world and to help us evaluate potential new chemistry and compounds from other companies.

Griffin and its wholly-owned subsidiaries manufacture and market a broad line of herbicides, insecticides and fungicides for agriculture in the U.S. and more than 40 other countries.

Fertilizer execs call for export promotion by U. S.

WASHINGTON — Development of the 1985 Farm Bill must focus not only on the 3 percent of Americans who farm but the 21 percent involved in the total agricultural sector, according to two businessmen appearing today before the Senate Agriculture Committee.

G.W. Garrett, president of Alliance Agronomics, a retail fertilizer operation in Mechanicsville, Va., and Ron Johnson, executive vice president of Agrico Chemical Co., a major producer of plant foods headquartered in Tulsa, Okla., told senators that past government actions to achieve "quick fixes" in the farm economy have ultimately harmed the farmer and the agribusinesses serving him.

The industry leaders, speaking on behalf of The Fertilizer Institute, were part of a Farm Bill hearing devoted for the first time exclusively to agri-business concerns.

Garrett and Johnson said their industry's role was to help improve farmer efficiency and productivity, but past government actions — such as the 1983 payment-in-kind program — have penalized both farmers and agribusiness for achieving that efficiency.

"Our industry must formulate plans on a long-term basis," Johnson said, "yet we are faced with short-term government actions that change the outlook almost overnight."

Garrett said companies "cannot adjust in three months to a drop of 80 million acres from its planned fertilizer sales, as was the case with the PIK program.

"Our industry alone paid dearly for PIK's quick fix — to the tune of $2 billion — and we are still struggling to recover from such a loss," Garrett continued. He said the experience revealed that America's approach to grain surplus management is "misguided, self-defeating, and unrelated to the impact on the overall economy."

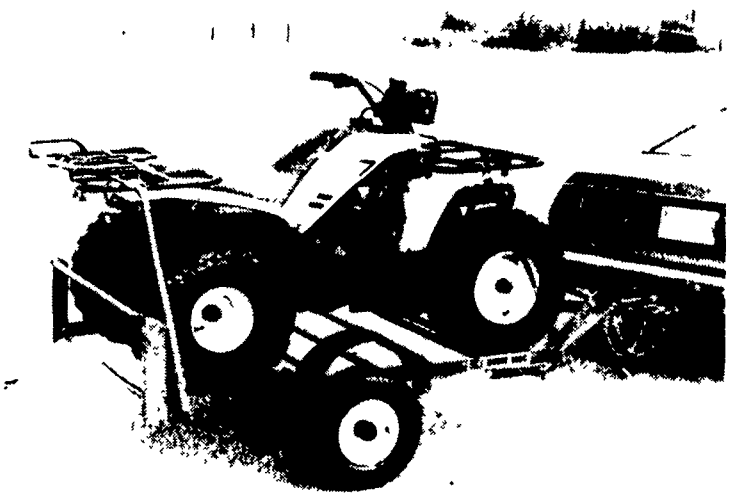
"We believe the best means of controlling the American farmer's inventory levels is through export promotion," Johnson added. Both spokesmen called for priority attention to reversing the "devastating loss in the international market for U.S. agricultural products."

They called on Congress to provide the necessary marketing tools and spending authority to improve America's competitive status in world grain markets.

The two industry representatives pointed to data illustrating the reaction of competitor nations to U.S. farm policy actions. As the U.S. curtailed production dramatically in 1983, for example, competitors sharply boosted harvested acres. Similarly, they added, today's U.S. inventory levels for wheat are almost twice that of all major competitors combined.

Garrett and Johnson urged continued and expanded export initiatives, including guaranteed loans, intermediate and blended credit, and implementation of an "export PIK" or volume bonus program for foreign buyers.

To effectively administer these efforts, they said, Congress must remove the "costly burden of cargo preference requirements," a law mandating use of higher cost U.S. vessels for 50 percent of all government-backed shipments.



Bush Hog trailers haul both three and four-wheel ATV's.

Bush Hog trailer fits all ATV makes

MOBILE, Ala. — The new Bush Hog ATV trailer is equipped with a fold-down ramp that allows one person to laod any make of three or four-wheel ATV safely and easily, according to Bob Weaver of Carlisle, Bush Hog sales representative for Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The 60-inch wide by 103-inch long trailer has a 47-inch by 58-inch rail-type bed that can be converted to utility use by bolting on a plywood deck. The fold-down loading ramp locks in an upright position to help secure the ATV to the trailer.

Lights, fenders, tag mounts and a 1-7/8 inch ball hitch for trucks and cars are all standard equipment.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

Farm spending and survival

Last week I got on one of my soap box kicks - this is a good time of the year to do that because my potential audience is much reduced. Based on my discussion from last week, logical questions would be:

- how many farmers are in serious trouble,
- how many are in considerable trouble,
- how many are in trouble, and
- how many will survive?

Of course no one really knows the answer to any of these four questions.

Depending on your outlook of what you wanted to prove, you could say 5 to 20 percent for the first point, an additional 5 to 15 percent for the second, and as many as 35 to 40 percent for the third.

Question four is the hardest to get a good answer for because it depends on what time span we are considering.

Two years ago I said by the end of 1985, 20% of our farmers would probably be out of business. I was probably a bit high and probably a year or two early.

Who

Who will still be farming in 1990? Probably the majority of those who were farming in 1980. If you want to be one of this majority then you will have to:

Have no or very low debt, (10% of assets or less) and/or;

Be able to make sound spending decisions, or;

Be willing to live on a sub-standard level.

Spending Decisions

One time I worked with a farmer who got into a financial bind. His solution was to quit feeding grain to his cows. Result - he did not have enough cash to buy fertilizer or weed control material for his crops. Result - he was even more short on feed that fall. Result - he rationed his cows that winter and produced even less milk. Result - he had to borrow money on his farm so his family could live and he could pay off bills. Result - this seemed to be an easy way to solve his problem. Result - he is no longer farming. Lesson - not spending may be as disastrous as foolish spending.

Another farm family had a conflict between spending for the business and spending for the family. The wife said "I demand equal spending rights - I will spend $1 on living for every $1 spent on the business." Her error was one of lack of understanding that a farm is a unique business whereby the family life is so closely tied to the degree of success of the business that her attitude was disasterville. End result was family nearly out of business. Lesson - family living is one of the three things farm income must pay but only once.

Overspending on business toys was the downfall of a third family. They worked hard - using second hand equipment until one day they decided "we have arrived - we are over the hump." Then it was a second farm, a $60,000 silo, a $35,000 tractor with radio, an $80,000 manure storage unit, $20,000 for a new kitchen, a long deserved vacation. Suddenly there was no more cash - suddenly bills started to come in with nothing in the pot to pay them. Result - a successful farm family reeling under a financial burden that they thought they had overcome. Lesson - spending must be planned - planned expenditures include where the money will come from.

Pride can be both the incentive that makes things go and the stumbling block that can cause a downfall. Theoretically, sharing certain pieces of equipment between or among farmers makes economic sence. Unfortunately cropping restrictions, especially planting corn and harvesting hay, can cause problems - this is B's turn to get corn in first but A's ground is ready and B's is not quite ready.

Then there is pride. I can do it alone - I don't need to put up with his b.s. In some cases the decision to go it alone is sound and has been well thought out, including where the extra capital money will come from.

In others it is a spur of the moment decision without considering economic consequences. Sometimes pride can also cause a farmer to become flattered byd an adroit salesman. Lesson - make financial decisions on economic fact not emotion or pride.

LET AgTec HANDLE ALL YOUR SPRAYING NEEDS give your vegetables wrap around protection

AgTec's rotating vegetable head gives complete coverage with wrap around protection. 190 MPH Air Stream carries mist-size droplets that penetrate and cling, even to the undersides of leaves. Without leaving the tractor seat you can rotate the head 270° to spray with the wind and adjust the deflector for swaths up to 60 feet, with AgTec low volume efficiency you'll reduce chemical and fuel costs, and spray more acres a day. The rotating head is available on 3 pt. hitch and pull-type AgTec sprayers with PTO-drive. See us today for a demonstration.

FACT

PROWL® in your tank mix stops velvetleaf and foxtails cold.

Extra tough weeds in corn call for extra tough measures. PROWL® herbicide with Bladex 80W[1] or atrazine, applied early post-emergence, delivers the punch you need to knock out your toughest grasses and weeds—including velvetleaf and foxtail. Do NOT incorporate in corn. PROWL. Tough control of velvetleaf and foxtail.

THE SIDE-MOUNT THAT CUTS GRASS AND COSTS.

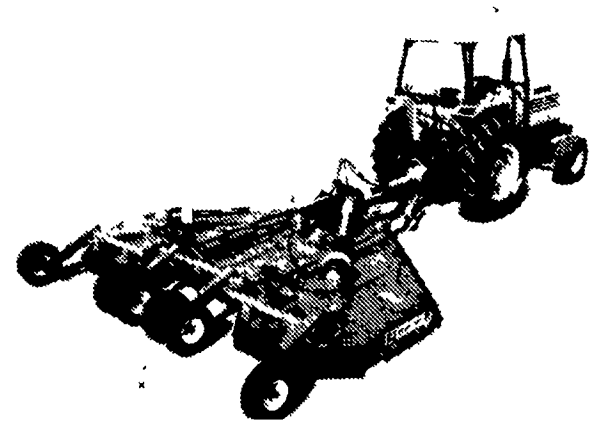
Our new Bush Hog SM-60 side mount cutter cuts ditch-banks, roadsides, and fishpond banks and it cuts costs. The SM-60 is engineered with the quality features that are making Bush Hog the biggest name in farm implements:

With a vertical cutter head movement range of 175 degrees, 90 degrees up for jobs such as maintaining fence rows and 85 degrees down for jobs such as mowing ditches, and 31¼ inches of lateral movement. With automatic lateral adjustment of a counterweight that keeps tractors on a safe, even keel while reducing wear and tear on the hitch.

Come in and see us to put all these features to work on your farm – cutting grass and cutting costs.

BUSH HOG®
SM-60 Side Mount

NOT ALL FIELDS ARE PERFECTLY FLAT.



That's why the Bush Hog® model 2615 15-foot cutter's wings are designed to float along contours as severe as 90 degrees up or 22 degrees down while shredding stalks, clipping pastures or cutting along rights-of-way, drainage ditches, terraces and fence rows As it does so, an automatic height adjustment keeps the wings cutting at the same height as the center section. A framing system featuring closed box members allows us to make the 2615 pounds lighter without sacrificing any of the strength you've come to expect from a Bush Hog And, less weight not only means less wear and tear on your tractor but it has also allowed us to cut the price

Why pay more to get less – make Bush Hog's success your success

Farm Bureau backs senate budget compromise plan

PARK RIDGE, IL — The American Farm Bureau Federation today expressed its support for the budget compromise being considered by the Senate this week.

"For many years, farmers have wanted to see a reduction in federal spending," said Robert Delano, AFBF president. "This compromise offers the first opportunity to achieve major spending cuts, moving toward our long term goal of reducing the size of the federal government and the federal deficit."

Delano, a grain farmer from Virginia, said the proposal would benefit both the overall and farm economies. "This plan would pare the federal deficit by about $50 billion for fiscal year 1986. To the extent that this cut in government spending frees up more money for use by the private sector, the general economy will be stronger and interest rates will be lower. This will benefit the general economy and farmers, in particular. A one percent decline in interest rates would save farmers about $2 billion in interest expense."

The deficit-reduction package, which was agreed to by Senate Republican leaders and the White House, would cut the federal deficit by $52 billion in fiscal 1986 and by nearly $300 billion over three years, leaving an estimated $100 billion deficit in 1988.

Spending for farm support programs, under the proposal, would be reduced by $8 billion over three years. Said Delano, "This cut, however, is far less than what was originally proposed by the administration in its now-dead 1985 farm bill."

If the budget package were enacted, it would mean $10 billion would be allocated eacy year for farm spending, a sum Delano called "reasonable, given historic spending patterns and present budget constraints."

Another $10 billion in savings from agricultural programs would be achieved by reforms in four other spending areas: Farmers Home Administration lending, federal crop insurance, rural utility financing, conservation and by freezing extension and research at 1985 levels.

"While the budget compromise eliminates or modifies many programs beneficial to farmers, it is certainly less burdensome than the Administration's original proposal which took disproportionate cuts from the agricultural sector," the farm leader said.

"Any attempts to alter the proposed budget cuts and reforms substantially will likely result in a failure to arrive at a consensus and signal the market that federal government fiscal policy continues to run out of control."

Rewriting farm legislation

Congress is in the unique position once again of shaping the future of agriculture. It's time to rewrite the farm bill. And Congress is left with the interesting choice of writing a new bill, renewing the old one or doing nothing. All of those options carry with them tremendous potential for the future of American agriculture and the nation's food supply.

To do nothing and let the 1980 law run out, can only be described as irresponsible. Because that would mean agriculture would be operating under laws passed in the early 30's and beyond - laws that may have suited the horse-drawn and Depression-Ridden agriculture of that period. But obviously not in tune with modern farming methods and current financial problems. While some forecasters are saying that could happen, I don't believe it will.

So let's lay that one aside and focus on the other options, a brand-new program with a bright new direction or more of the same.

It will take more creativity than Congress has shown in a long time to come up with a brand-new bill. At best, it would be another try at something that has been done before. Something that didn't work in a previous administration that might be more timely now or something that started to work but world conditions changed and farm needs changed with it.

There have been so many attempts at solving "agriculture's problems" that there is nothing much new to try. Farm programs have messed with supply, demand, price and almost anything else that was considered a possibility for improving the situation. And in my judgement not one of those programs has really done the job.

That's not to condemn any administration or any Congress. It's just an impossible job. You can't write a farm bill that will cure all the ills of the many components of modern agriculture anymore than you could write a manufacturing bill that would suit all of the individual manufacturing firms.

Perhaps that's what is confusing to consumers and maybe to some agricultural interests. Farmers aren't all alike anymore. And maybe they never were. The farm programs of the 1930's that put the small diversified farmers back on their feet worked when farming was small, family-oriented, labor-intensive and diversified.

In those days a farm family could almost live on what it produced with very few store-bought inputs - a little fertilizer, a little seed, an occasional hand- or horse-powered tool and a few personal necessities. That's what farmers purchased. Meanwhile, they lived off the land, toughing it out when times were really desperate and prospering as they got better.

That mold won't fit anymore. Not in 1985 when thousands of farmers don't even live on farms, don't own any livestock and don't even plant a garden. A modern farmer would have a tough time living on soybeans and corn.

Today's large farmer makes no particular effort to live off the land, purchasing the things he needs just like the rest of us. That includes huge amounts of fertilizer, seed, fuel, chemicals, machinery, building materials and on down the list of farm supplies and consumer items.

A farm bill of a by-gone era designed for a small diversified farmer just doesn't fill the bill.

The final option to consider in the 1985 farm bill is a renewal of what we have now. And that's likely to be the choice. Sure Congress will tinker around with it, maybe put some new names on some parts of it.

But I'll be surprised if it strays very far from the current plan. There are just too many different signals being carried to Capitol Hill. Too many points of view. Too many problems. Too many political uncertainities.

If there were a clear mandate out in farm country that a certain program would solve the problem then Congress might act. But there isn't.

There are a lot of conflicting signals, and at best a general agreement that something needs to be done to improve the export situation but not if it costs consumers great sums of money.

An expensive farm bill is not part of an effort aimed at balancing the national budget. Heavy export subsidies don't set well with consumers who don't want to see dramatic food price increases.

Congress has a difficult job when it really gets down to wrestling with the 1985 Farm Bill. You can be sure the result won't suit many farmers and won't solve many of their problems.

Consider all variables when planting test plots

TIPTON, Ind. – "How" a crop test plot is planted is even more important than "why" because results don't prove anything without an accurate comparison.

"When planting a test plot, putting out a series of hybrids or varieties without some system to account for the soil variability makes the work basically fruitless," says Bob Palmer, manager of agronomy services for the Eastern Division of Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc.

The same holds true for observing someone else's plots – be certain the variables are accounted for, he suggests.

A test plot quite often appears uniform across the field, but that doesn't mean the plants are all growing under the same conditions.

Plot variables

Palmer notes that large plots often contain several soil types and varied environmental factors – drainage, texture, pH and fertility levels – that have a direct influence on how well a hybrid or variety performs.

"Because fields vary widely, we don't expect to compare a hybrid or variety in one field with one in another. That same variability can and often does exist within the same field. The only way to account for these differences is to plant a check hybrid or variety".

Palmer suggests choosing a locally adapted, consistently good-yielding hybrid or variety and planting this as the check every other or every third row in a strip plot.

"In essence, this creates a series of side-by-side trials. Each hybrid or variety being tested is compared to the same check hybrid or variety all the way across the plot," the agronomist says.

Palmer illustrates this with an example: "Say the check hybrid yields 140 bushels in one strip in the plot and 175 bushels in another strip in the same plot. If a hybrid being tested yields 130 bushels beside the 140 bushel strip, then expect a 25 percent increase in that 130 bushel yield if it were near the higher yielding strip."

Plot Size

There isn't one ideal size for a test plow, however, it should only be as large as absolutely necessary for a valid comparison. As a general rule – the larger the plot, the greater chance of variability within it. Row length should be long enough so there can be an accurate yield weight taken when the plot is harvested–200-300 feet under most conditions.

"A weigh wagon isn't needed if the truck or grain wagon can be weighed. With a good-sized load, the error will be minimal," Palmer says.

Even though it's tempting to switch to an outstanding new hybrid or variety based on last year's test plot, Palmer cautions against it.

"Weather or pests can have a dramatic influence on yields in one year that are not felt in another; performance can also vary from one location to another. Visit several different plots in your area to see if a particular hybrid or variety that performs well on your farm still looks outstanding. Then ask your seed salesman or dealer for yield test results from the past two or three years before making a complete changeover."

On-farm test plots are an effective way to compare one hybrid or variety against another. However, planting without a check or reference point can make any data from those pivots invalid for comparison purposes.

Conservation tillage comes of age

TIPTON, IN – By the end of this decade half of all farm land will be cultivated using one or more conservation tillage methods. That figure will rise to 80 percent by the end of the century and will be 95 percent by the year 2010, the Soil Conservaiton Service (SCS) estimates.

"Conservation tillage has come of age. The benefits now outweigh the costs and the future looks good with the public and private sectors cooperating to spur the growth," said Dr. Robert Palmer, agronomy services manager for the Eastern Division of Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc.

Palmer was keynote speaker at the second annual New Jersey conservation tillage conference held recently in Trenton.

While the years ahead look good for conservation tillage, this wasn't always the case. A lack of emphasis by state extension services and over-emphasis on engineering and mechanical stuctures by SCS contributed to lagging soil conservation efforts, Palmer said.

"In some states, SCS and the extension service coordinated very well and there was progress, but in many others there was not good communication and conservation suffered."

However, both agencies are working together now to promote the effectiveness and cost-savings of conservation tillage. They are being helped by private companies.

The Conservation Tillage Information Center in Fort Wayne, IN, is one example of private donations funding a public conservation effort, Palmer said.

"Private effort is also seen in the pamphlets, books, radio and television productions devoted to soil conservation. Promotional programs such as the Young Farmer Conservation Tillage contests sponsored in recent years by Pioneer and corporate donations to fund conservation research at universities and other institutions are also ways agribusiness is involved," he added.

There is a very good reason for the current concern about soil conservation. Only 21 percent of the land mass on earth is suitable for farming and the soil on much of that land is eroding at a rate faster than it can be replaced, Palmer said.

A 1934 survey showed 50 million acres were severely damaged by erosion and twice that number were on the verge of severe damage. In 1959, researchers estimated that half of America's soil productivity was lost in the first half of the century. Another study in the same year estimated the eastern states had lost nearly 40 percent of their topsoil.

While soil erosion was identified as a problem in the mid-Thirties, it was often overlooked because agricultural productivity continued to rise. However, this increase was due to technological advances in plant breeding and crop produciton not because of wholesale improvements in conservation.

"The time is right for conservation tillage. The equipment is ready and breeders have produced the right seeds. The problem of soil erosion can be solved now that the public and private sectors are united in this effort," Palmer concluded.

A new breed of dairy feed...

Purina
Easy Care
Block
dry cows and heif
• Virtually No Water
• Starch Up to Rain And Hot Weather
• Convenient Salt Red Block
• Quality Forage Supplement
• Highly Palatable... With Intake Limiters
• Contains Vitamins A And D Selenium And Magnesium

A convenient method of challenge feeding without a cash outlay for equipment Available in 50 and 500 pound blocks is a 22% protein block formulated specifically as a feeding supplement for dry cows and heifers. Available in 50 and 500 lb. blocks.

...formulated for specific nutritional needs

- A High-Energy Complete Feed
  for increased milk production and persistency. Contains enough nutrients to provide two pounds of milk per pound of consumption.
  Can help reduce weight loss during lactation and improve breeding efficiency. It is 30% higher in energy than former Purina Dairy Sup-R-Block.
- Completely Balanced
  Offers advantages associated with additional balanced ration without additional labor or equipment. Results in better digestion and more efficient use of nutrients.
- Block Form
  Convenient and easy to feed. Compliments any feeding system.
- Weatherproof
  Rain rolls right off it, the sun can't melt it and snow and cold won't cause it to break down. The cows get it all!
- Palatable - with Intake Limiters
  Molasses makes it highly palatable but intake limiters prevents over consumption when fed as recommended.
- Contains Vitamins-Minerals-Selenium and Magnesium
  Meets Vitamin A and D requirements of dairy cows when fed as recommended. Provides Selenium and Magnesium known to aid in reproductive performance and in the control of grass tetany.
- Weatherproof
  Like its companion product, Easy Care Blocks stands up to all kinds of weather, so waste is minimal
- Highly Palatable - with Intake Limiters
  Molasses-based for palatability but contains intake limiters to prevent over consumption when fed as recommended. Dry cows and heifers get what they need — no more, no less
- Balances Forages
  Supplements forages to provide the balanced nutrition important to dry cows and heifers. Easy Care Block is formulated specifically to the nutrient requirements of dairy dry cows and heifers.
- Self Fed
  Saves both time and labor — especially on hard to reach temporary pastures.
- Contains Vitamins-Minerals-Selenium and Magnesium
  Meets Vitamin A and D Requirements when fed as recommended and supplies Selenium and Magnesium lacking in some forages.
